STARTLING FACTS.

The Motorist of the heavy type Touring Car and who has not experienced the delights of Light Car Motoring does not realise the capabilities of the smaller machine.

In actual test he would find that the small Car will do all that its bigger brother does, but at half the cost, and with apparently greater relish for the work. He will be struck with its quicker acceleration, perfect comfort, and with finding that one gallon of petrol does where it used to take two, and one gallon of oil where it used to take three, and equal economy in tyres.

These are facts you can substantiate with a MORRIS-OXFORD or COWLEY.

LAW REPORTS.

A BELFAST FIRM'S CONTRACT.—In the King's Bench Division, Dublin, yesterday, judgment was given on a motion to set aside an order made by Mr. Justice Powell in the intended action, of Wheeler and Co., Ltd., against Jeffrey and another, giving the plaintiffs leave to issue and serve a writ on the defendants out of the jurisdiction. The plaintiffs are a firm of merchants and mineral water manufacturers, carrying on business in Belfast, and the defendants are brewers in Edinburgh. It appeared that in 1911 the plaintiffs entered into a contract with the defendants to take up an agency for the sale of defendants' beer on the West Coast of Africa. It was alleged by the plaintiffs that the contract was broken by the defendants, and they seek to recover damages for breach. The defendants denied that a contract had been entered into and concluded between them. The negotiations were carried on by correspondence. The point for decision was whether a letter of the 10th June, 1911, from the plaintiffs to the defendants, agreeing to accept the agency as from the 1st July following was an acceptance that made it a contract entered into in Ireland, or whether it introduced a new term, namely, that the contract was to begin on July 1st, and whether the reply of the defendants, dated July 12th, concluded the contract. Mr. Justice Pim held that there was a complete and binding contract, and that the remark about the beginning of the agency was merely a suggestion. In his opinion the application should be dismissed with costs. Mr. Justice Gordon dissented, and held that there was not a binding contract entered into, and, therefore, the order for service out of the jurisdiction should be set aside with costs. The judges being thus divided, the junior judge (Mr. Justice Gordon) withdrew his judgment, and the order made was that the motion be refused. Mr. Serjeant Hanna and Mr. Tobias (instructed by Messrs. Wheeler and McCutcheon) appeared for the plaintiffs; Mr. Murphy, K.C., and Mr. Dockrell (instructed by Mr. R. N. Potterton) appeared for the defendants.

KERRY BREACH OF PROMISE.—In the King's Bench Division, before Mr. Justice Pim, in the case of Maggie Foley, of Nelson street, Tralee, v. Edward Boursin, dentist, of Listowel, Mr. Roche (instructed by Mr. John Moran), for the defendant, applied for an order for discovery of documents. The action was, counsel said, for breach of promise of marriage. The defence was a denial of the promise and also a plea of mutual recision. Counsel moved on the affidavit of the defendant, who stated that the plaintiff had in her power or procurement letters written by him to her of which he had kept no copy, also copies of letters written by the plaintiff to him, the originals of which he had lost or destroyed, and, moreover, copies of letters written by the plaintiff to him in August and September, 1916, and especially a copy of a letter written by the plaintiff to him in September, 1916, wherein she asked that they be friends in the ordinary way, and the original of his reply to it. Mr. Justice Pim made an order for discovery.

FARM LABOURERS' WAGES.—In the King's Bench Division the Lord Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Gibson, and Mr. Justice Kenny had before them a question of some importance to farmers and farm labourers in connection with the payment of "harvest money" to agricultural labourers—namely, whether or not a farmer or employer of an agricultural labourer could lawfully deduct the amount of the harvest money which he allowed him from the minimum wage to which he was entitled as fixed by order of the Wages Board. The question arose on a case stated by the magistrates at Castletownroche Petty Sessions, County Cork, on the 1st of July last in the case of the King (Allen) v. Cuppage, in which Mr. George E. V. Cuppage, a farmer, of Clifford, was charged on summons by District Inspector Thomas J. Allen, R.I.C., with having unlawfully failed to pay Thomas Dwane, an agricultural labourer in his employment, on the 20th December last, the sum of 24/6 for the week ending on that date, being the minimum weekly wage to which he was entitled. It appeared from the evidence that the defendant (Cuppage) paid Dwane at the rate of 16/6 per week, deducting £3 harvest money which he had allowed him in addition to other allowances, and on the defendant's behalf it was contended that Dwane had been overpaid in respect of his minimum wage, and as the defendant could take credit for the value of all the benefits and advantages allowed in the schedule to the order of the Agricultural Wages Board, including the harvest money payment, and the magistrates agreed with that view, and dismissed the summons. Mr. Babington, K.C., and Mr. Lipsett (instructed by the Chief Crown Solicitor) argued that the magistrates' decision was wrong, and there was no appearance on the other side. The Judges appeared to be divided in opinion on the subject, Mr. Justice Gibson pointing out that if the decision was upheld it would do away with the "harvest money" allowance altogether; and judgment was reserved.

CLAIM FOR EXCESS PROFITS DUTY.—In the Court of Appeal, before the Lord Chancellor, Lords Justices Rowan and O'Connor, an appeal by the Commissioners of Inland Revenue, in the case of J. and R. O'Kane from a decision of the King's Bench Division was heard, the arguments having concluded after nearly four days. The Commissioners held a special sitting at Belfast to assess the excess profits duty which was payable by Messrs. O'Kane, who were wine and spirit merchants in Belfast, for the year 1917. The Commissioners assessed the duty at £27,900 for the accounting period under the Finance Act, 1915. It appeared that Messrs. O'Kane in March, 1916, had decided to retire from business, and instead of disposing of their stock in one lot, they in fairness to their customers, gave them an opportunity of purchasing as they required. In that way the winding-up was carried over into the year 1917. The Commissioners found that there was a bona fide winding up and that Messrs. O'Kane had gradually disposed of all their stock at the end of the accounting period. The total sales for 1917 amounted to £33,689, and the Inland Revenue Commissioners claimed 80 per cent. of that sum, less the statutory deductions. Messrs. O'Kane appealed to the King's Bench Division from that claim, and the Court unanimously held that the sales having been bona fide made for the purpose of winding up the business, were, in fact, realisations of capital, and not taxable as profits. It was submitted that the Finance Act of 1918 introduced a new and amending provision with respect to such sales, and it provided that from and after the passing of the 1918 Act all future sales, whether winding-up or otherwise, should be deemed to be in the ordinary course of business. The contention on behalf of Messrs. O'Kane, throughout, had been that these sales were not sales in the ordinary course of business, and that as such they were not liable to be taxed in the year 1917, though possibly they would have been liable under the Act of 1918 if the sales had been made after the passing of the 1918 Act. Mr. Justice Gibson held that if the sales in respect of which it was sought to charge excess profit duty represented capital, selling off in the legitimate process of closing a business that was honestly intended to be wound up, such sales were not converted into sales in the ordinary course of trade by reason of any of the facts that appeared in this case. The contention in the Court of Appeal on behalf of the Commissioners was that these sales, having been made over a protracted period, and having been made on the business premises to the regular customers, were, in fact, sales in the ordinary course of business, and that the profits arising therefrom must be liable to excess profit duty. The Court reserved judgment. Counsel for the appellants (Commissioners)—Mr. Babington, K.C.; Mr. G. Shannon, and Mr. H. Kennedy (instructed by Mr. R. Martin). For the respondents—Mr. S. L. Brown, K.C.; Mr. Herbert Wilson, K.C., and Mr. M. C. Maguire (instructed by Mr. Joseph Donaghy.

HUSBAND AND WIFE IN JAIL.—In the Chancery Division, before the Master of the Rolls, in the case of Moore v. Kelly, Mr. Leech, K.C. (instructed by Messrs. Matheson, Ormsby, and Prentice) applied, on behalf of Luke Moore, as agent for Bernard Farrelly, for an order recommitting to prison Christopher Moore, who, by an order of the 18th September, had been committed to Mountjoy Prison for six weeks for contempt of court, in refusing to deliver up possession of lands situate at Finea, Co. Westmeath, which had been purchased by Bernard Farrelly. An order for the committal of his wife, Mrs. Julia Moore, had been made on the same date. Christopher Moore was arrested on the 7th October by the Sheriff of Westmeath, but, owing to the production of a medical certificate, it had been found impossible to remove Mrs Moore from the house. A doctor, nurse, and ambulance were, however, brought to the house last Saturday, and Mrs. Moore also was now in Mountjoy Prison. The recommittal of her husband on the expiration of the term of six weeks was now sought, on the ground that if liberated he would attempt to take possession of the lands again. Mr. Finlay (instructed by Mr. L. C. P. Smith), for Christopher Moore, opposed the application. The Master of the Rolls held that the application was untenable, and refused to make the order sought.

"ANTIQUE FURNITURE DISPUTE."—In this case (Van Cutsem v. Wine), reported yesterday, we are asked to state that the case was settled on the terms mentioned, with the addition that the plaintiff pays 20 guineas towards defendant's costs.

"The Little Nurse for Little Ills"

My heart with sweet emotion fills, when I recall her gentle aid, at times when I was badly frayed. My world-worn, weary soul she cheers, when I have Chilblains in my ears; she brings her Mentholatum jar, and spreads some where the Chilblains are, and lo, the blamed thing bumps the bumps, and I'm the happiest of chumps. And when my face and hands are chapped, by wintery tempests chafed and slapped, the little nurse for little ills, she comes, and joyous tunes she trills, and with her Mentholatum jar she hooks my wagon to a star. She is a comfort all my days; I praise her and her healing ways; she saves me many doctor's bills, the little nurse for little ills.

BELFAST HARBOUR'S PROSPERITY.

At the meeting of the Belfast Harbour Commissioners yesterday, Mr. J. Milne Barbour, D.L., presiding, the Harbourmaster reported that 218 vessels had arrived at the port from the 31st October to the 13th November. The total tonnage of vessels which arrived from 1st January to the 13th November was 2,290,091, or an increase of 211,760 compared with 1919. The question of fuel oil being allowed to escape from vessels into the harbour was referred to, and it was intimated that a by-law on the subject would be submitted for consideration as soon as possible.

COAL FOR SMALL CONSUMERS.

DEPUTATION TO AREA COAL SUPPLIES COMMITTEE.

A deputation from the Small Consumers' Coal Supply Committee attended a meeting of the Midland Area Coal Supplies Committee at 7 D'Olier street, Dublin, on Tuesday, to ask for the necessary supply of household coal from Lancashire or Scotland, to open a Coal Dépôt for families unable to store coal for themselves. The following composed the deputation:—Monsignor Dunne, P.P., V.G., Chairman; the Dean of St. Patrick's, Sir Joseph Glynn, the Rev. Randall C. Phillips, Miss Smyth (Ladies' Association of Charity), and Miss S. C. Harrison, Hon. Secretary, who read a letter from the Chairman of the Public Health Committee (Mrs. Wyse Power), stating that "the Dublin Corporation, owing to its financial position, could not undertake a Municipal coal yard just now," so that the burden had fallen on the Small Consumers' Coal Supply Committee, and hoping that the supply asked for will be cheerfully given, otherwise it will not be possible to prevent a recurrence of deaths from want of fuel during the next five or six months.

The Dean of St. Patrick's emphasised the high death rate of children last spring owing to want of fuel, when money was useless to procure it for the poor.

Mr. Hewat, Chairman of the Area Committee, assured the deputation of the Committee's desire to help them in their work, and said that he would immediately communicate with the Coal Mines Department in London as to the Committee's estimate of the amount of coal required to provide for the customers of the bell-men and hucksters of Dublin, which the Hon. Secretary of the Small Consumers' Coal Supply Committee had estimated at 2,000 tons per week, at least, although her Committee only proposed to ask for 1,200 to 1,500 tons weekly to begin with.

The Hon. Secretary of the Small Consumers' Coal Supplies Committee said that her Committee would also send in their estimate based on the figures given by the retailers of coal per bag and stone.

Sir Joseph Glynn said that the shortage during the war and after had been very severe, and that he had found the utmost difficulty in obtaining the minimum amounts required. He was there to press for steps to be taken to prevent the danger of such shortage in the future.

The deputation thanked the Committee, and withdrew.

The proceedings of the last meeting of the Board were read, confirmed, and signed. Mrs. Davys, Mrs. Frank Ridgeway, W. Houghton Fry, Esq., and Daniel Purcell, Esq., having kindly consented to act, were appointed Visiting Governors for the month.

Payments gratefully acknowledged, and six new Life Governors of the Hospital were unanimously elected as such:—Sir John Irwin, J.P. (per Hon. Treasurer), £21; Miss Lily Atkinson (per Mrs. Tittle-Hamilton), £21; R. J. Barton, Esq., £21; Henry B. Hill, Esq. (per Vice-Chairman), £21; Arthur F. Harding, Esq. (per Hon. Treasurer), £21; "A Friend," qualifying as Life Governor Miss E. Field (per Joseph Ward, Esq., J.P.), £21.

The Chairman alluded to the Hospital's pressing overdraft at the bank (£11,435 1s. 10d.), and the need for additional support to meet the greatly increased cost of maintaining the patients. For some years past the Hospital has been living at the rate of £520 per month over its normal income. The institution has claims on all classes of the community, as it admits poor persons of every religious denomination from all parts of Ireland, and supplies them with lodging, food, clothing, medicines, medical and surgical appliances, and all manner of necessaries without fee or reward from the sufferer.

The Chairman appealed particularly for contributions of £21, to qualify for Life Governorship. Life Governors have many privileges; they are entitled to visit the Hospital at all times consistent with its due order, to recommend candidates for admission and vote for their election, and to vote for the election of the Managing Committee and the Visiting Medical Officers.

The election of patients was then proceeded with. Nine names appeared on the printed list, and the vacancies being in excess of the number of applicants, all nine were declared duly elected patients, viz.:—Joseph Murphy, cancer of the mouth; Peter Corrigan, consumption; Christopher Moran, consumption; John O'Toole, consumption; George Carroll, tuberculosis of the foot; Frank Edwards, paralysis of the legs; John Clegg Hill, heart disease; Richard Mann, general tuberculosis; Thomas Bertie Reilly, heart disease and elephantiasis.

The Board adjourned to Tuesday, 21st December, 1920, when an election for female patients will take place.

The Board tender their grateful thanks for the following kind contributions received since last meeting:—£5 5s. from Mrs. Crosfield (Life Governor). £2 2s. each—Mrs. Bellingham, Messrs. Bewley and Draper, Ltd.; R. B. Boyce, Esq.; Mrs. A. M. Collum (Life Governor). £2 each—Robert E. Stokes, Esq. (Life Governor); Mrs. Rothwell. £1 1s. each—Mrs. H. J. Higginbotham, James O. Treasurer), The Haven, Palmerston Gardens, Rathmines; or by the Registrar, at the Hospital.

THE ABBEY THEATRE.

It was diverting to find a little play which had its justification in current religio-political antagonisms, abruptly dismissing them at the last minute for a wider human appeal, which had no such provocation. That was the method of "The Island of Saints, and How to Get Out of It," by Mr. St. John Ervine, as produced at the Abbey Theatre last night. It was essentially "a small piece of the times," lightly woven about the return of an Irish millionaire from the United States to the cottage of his cobbler cousin in County Down in pursuit of rest. F. J. McCormick satisfactorily portrayed the anæmic millionaire, who finally induces the cobbler's son (Tony Quinn), racked by "Sinn Feiners and Orangemen alike," to emigrate to America. Peter Nolan, as the cobbler, was most effective.

In his one-act comedy, "Sovereign Love," which followed, Mr. T. C. Murray has well handled the country marriage market theme. There was nothing to choose between Eric Gorman's and Peter Nolan's delineations of character of the two fathers, who met in a village hotel by accident, and set to the making of a marriage for their children. Dorothy Lynd, as Ellen, the bride-elect, whose over-practical father lost her an indifferent husband, gave a highly pleasing performance, and the peace-making Tom Daly could hardly have been better represented than by Barry Fitzgerald.

When the mystery-suggesting characters of Lord Dunsany's "A Night at an Inn" crept on to the stage it was hard to recollect the lighter pieces. The Toff, A. C. Scott Fortescue, was most admirably played by Ralph Brereton Barry. F. J. McCormick, Eric Gorman, and Michael J. Dolan brought us into the company of Bill and Albert and Sniggers again. The piece was very favourably received.

INTERNATIONAL BIBLE READING ASSOCIATION.

The first annual meeting of the Dublin District (which embraces Leinster, Munster, and Connaught) of the International Bible Reading Association was held in St. Andrew's Parochial Hall, St. Andrew street, Dublin, last evening. There was a fair attendance, which was presided over by Rev. J. Northridge.

The report, which was read by Rev. J. Mitchell, stated that the membership of the Dublin and Ulster Districts was now 29,000, with 435 branches. There had been a net gain in the Dublin district during the year of six branches, with 2,400 members. This was very encouraging, and indicated very commendable zeal on the part of the branch secretaries.

The Chairman, addressing the meeting, dwelt on the importance of reading God's Word at all times, and particularly at the present moment it had a staying and steadying power that no other book could give. God's Word was light, it was life, and the reading of it gave joy as nothing else did.

Interesting addresses bearing on the usefulness of the union and its many objects were delivered by Rev. T. J. Galley, Mr. R. J. Swirles, and others, and a successful meeting concluded.

A New York telegram, dated Monday, says—In the course of the war the British Government commandeered the steamer Baron Ogilvy after it had already been chartered by the Hogarth Shipping Corporation to a Texas company. The latter has now brought a suit against the Hogarth Corporation, and the British Embassy on Monday applied for permission of the Supreme Court to intervene as a friend of the Court. The application explains the great importance to the British Government that an authoritative decision be given on the right to intervene in view of the precedent involved.

RESTITUTION DECREE AGAINST AN IRISH GUARDS COLONEL.

Mr. Justice Horridge yesterday afternoon in the Divorce Court, London, granted a decree of restitution of conjugal rights against Colonel Richard Romer Claude Baggallay, whose wife said he had admitted to her in Cairo that he had formed another attachment.

Colonel Baggallay, the wife added, is now in the Irish Guards, stationed in Egypt. The couple were married in 1910. Last Christmas the wife wrote:—

DEAR ROMER,—Since leaving you at Alexandria, I have, naturally, been thinking very much of what your position is to be. I am writing to ask you, notwithstanding what you said, to let me come back again to Egypt to live with you as your wife, and to bring Denis (their boy) with me.—Your affectionate wife, KITTY.

The Colonel replied:—

DEAR KITTY,—I am afraid I cannot agree to your coming back to Cairo, or living with me, even if I return to England. As you know already, we cannot get on together, and I do not propose to try any more. I admit it is no fault of yours; but I do not wish you to live with me any more as my wife. I prefer to be free, and will never change my mind.—Yours, ROMER.

He never did return to her, said the wife.

IRISH NURSES' UNION.

A meeting of members of the Irish Nurses' Union was held in the Molesworth Hall, Dublin, yesterday evening to consider the question of having a forty-eight hours' week made applicable to the nursing profession. Miss Bennett, President of the Union, presided, and, having referred to its progress and its objects, dealt with the conditions under which nurses worked, and advocated their linking up with trades unionism, because trade unions proposed to take a greater interest in hospitals than ever before, and the levy which it was proposed to put on members of these unions towards the support of their hospitals would bring in something like £60,000 a year to the Dublin hospitals. They would thus realise the influence which trades unionism would exercise on the nursing profession. The President was supported in favour of a forty-eight hours' week by Miss Wickham, Dr. Hennessy, and others, and a resolution was passed expressing the opinion that nurses and probationers should not be excluded from the Government's Hours of Employment Bill (No. 2), and strongly protesting against any proposal to legalise a longer working week for nurses than for the general body of workers.

UNLABELLED MARGARINE.—In the Northern Police Court, before Mr. Lupton, Thomas Mooney, Aughrim street, was fined 10/- for exposing for sale a parcel of margarine without having it labelled. A summons for delivering it to Food Inspector Tatty in an unstamped wrapper was adjourned. Mr. Lupton said that he was satisfied that no fraud was intended.

BOY'S DEATH FROM A KICK.—A verdict of death of accidental death was returned at an inquest held by Dr. Louis A. Byrne, City Coroner, at the Mater Misericordiæ Hospital, Dublin, yesterday, touching the death of Joseph Callaghan (aged 11), who lived at Finglas Bridge. It was stated that the boy prodded a horse with a stick, and that it kicked him in the face. The injury was received on the 6th inst., and the boy died on Sunday last.

PRESENTATION TO MR. JOHN COGHLAN.—The employés of the London and South Eastern Railway have decided to present Mr. John Coghlan with an address and presentation on the occasion of his appointment as Deputy Chairman, and in recognition of the esteem in which he was held during his 50 years' connection with the company. Fee was returned for trial yesterday in the Southern Police Court, on a charge of obtaining food and lodging by means of worthless cheques at St. Andrew's Hotel, Exchequer street. Detective Sergeant Johnston and Detective Officer Gibney had charge of the case.

IRISH-AMERICAN ARRIVALS IN DUBLIN.—Some two hundred Irish-American passengers arrived at the North Wall yesterday morning. They travelled by the Holyhead-Dublin express steamer Arvonia. These visitors were considerably worried with their luggage, which had been searched on arrival in England, in the first instance, and again across-Channel before embarking for Ireland. At the North Wall it was necessary for them to look after the conveyance of their luggage to the cabs or cars.

DUBLIN-BOUND VESSELS DELAYED BY STORM.—Incoming cross-Channel steamers to Dublin yesterday morning were again delayed by the severity of the weather conditions obtaining in the Irish Sea. The ss. Lady Carlow, from Liverpool, arrived at 12.30; the Olive, of the Laird Line, from Heysham, at noon; whilst the Burns Line steamer Magpie, from Glasgow, reached Dublin at 10 a.m. Smaller vessels than the regular cross-Channel steamers appear to have had strenuous crossings of the Irish Sea, and some craft which normally should have reached the Liffey on Monday or yesterday, were stated to be weather-bound awaiting a modification of conditions before sailing for the Liffey.

ELECTRICAL POWER ENGINEERS THREATEN TO STRIKE.

A national strike of technical supervisory and executive engineers at the electricity undertakings who are members of the Electrical Power Engineers' Association is threatened on December 14th, unless there is a settlement of the dispute which has arisen over the new wages schedule. The strike notices were originally intended to expire in a fortnight, but have been extended to December 14th, to enable the employers' side of the National Joint Board to persuade the undertakings concerned to observe the schedules. The whole of the municipal and private electricity undertakings of 1,000 kilowatts and over in England, Scotland, Ireland, and Wales are involved, the total number, including London, being 240.

Eight Bolsheviks who were recently arrested in the Baltic Sea on the way to Helsingfors have been handed over from the steamship Ariadne to the British naval authorities at Danzig. They will be sent to the Finnish-Russian frontier in exchange for British prisoners released from Baku.

SPORTING NEWS.

CURRAGH MEETING YESTERDAY.

THE NOVEMBER PLATE.

GOOD PERFORMANCE BY TIME.

The bitterly cold wind that swept across the heath rather marred the enjoyment of those who journeyed to the Curragh yesterday, and, in view of the uninviting outlook in the early hours, it was not surprising to find the attendance on the small side. The racing, however, panned out all right, for, though the ground rode heavy, there was no dearth of runners, and the sport, if uneventful, was quite interesting.

Treble Scotch and Just for Luck were best backed of the ten starters for the Killesher Hurdle Plate, with which a commencement was made, and of the two the last-named did best, and accounted for everything except Red Michael, who, however, won with a lot in hand. There were a couple of mishaps in the race, Klondyke falling at the penultimate obstacle and breaking her neck, whilst Bowchaser came down at the last hurdle, but he sustained no injuries, nor did either of the jockeys concerned. That consistent runner, Ardscull, marked up another smart performance in the Scurry Plate, in which he carried top weight to an easy victory over Louvois Lass and Le Roue, to whom he was conceding 19lb. and 33lb. respectively. Glenstella seemed to begin a trifle slowly, and never at any part of the contest held out any hope to her supporters.

Although at first declared a runner for the November Plate, Double Tip was subsequently withdrawn, and other notable absentees were Shanganagh and Ecila. A favourite was quickly found in Time, who was carrying a 10lb. penalty for his success at Leopardstown, the best backed of the others being Fairy Chief and Westview. Neither of these, however, gave the Ruan Beg representative much trouble, danger springing from another quarter, and when All Glass challenged vigorously in the last hundred yards and momentarily looked like catching the chestnut, there was no little excitement, but the stout-hearted son of My Prince held her at bay and had half a length to spare passing the judge's box. In the van from flagfall, he won in the style of a real good colt. Blazing Furze, who headed the quotations on the Rathbride Plate, showed a bold front for a mile and a quarter, when her bolt was shot, and Phedolf, shaking off Princethorpe in the concluding stages, scored a very popular victory in the hands of his owner, Captain Shirley, who, though minus an arm, rode a capital race. The second was also ridden by his veteran owner, Mr. Harry Beasley, who won the Grand National on Come Away nearly thirty years ago.

The Brownstown Plate fell an easy prey to Prudent Girl, who readily disposed of Benediction, who started a hot favourite. She was well ridden by little James Doyle; and that very capable apprentice was also seen to advantage on the hitherto disappointing Extravaganza in the Moderate Plate, in which Mr. Blake's filly easily accounted for her eleven opponents. Details:—

CHANTICLEER'S NOTES.

(SPECIAL TELEGRAM.)

DERBY, TUESDAY NIGHT.

Some very good sport is promised at Derby during the next three days, though the fields may not in the aggregate beat those at Leicester. The opening afternoon's bill of fare will consist of six events, the chief of which will be the Chesterfield Nursery, won on occasions by remarkably good horses, notably St. Simon. The race, as usual, is run over five furlongs, and is worth 1,000 sovs. The unbeaten Pharmacie has been awarded the top weight, but she will be an absentee. In trying to find the winner I shall vote for the much-improved

CHI-LO-SA.

My other selections are:—

Breadsall Plate—Monazite.
Belper Handicap—Nonentity.
Markeaton Plate—Fancy Man.
Rangemore Stakes—Crubenmore.
Doveridge Plate—Savile Row.

LEICESTER MEETING, YESTERDAY.

The weather was simply glorious for the concluding stage of the November meeting at Oadby yesterday, and, with fields again on the strong side, a much larger company had capital entertainment. The programme, with the Clock Tower Handicap as the leading item, was a better one financially, and this thousand-pounder proved a capital betting medium, eleven of the fifteen runners having a quotation. Chuette was favoured from Brigand, but the mare could not act up the hill at the finish, and Brigand actually finished last of all, Soranus, which took the lead after going three furlongs, making the remainder of the running, and winning by three-quarters of a length from Tom Powrie. Mirabilite, second to Husky on Monday, carried off the Humberstone Selling Plate in clever fashion from War Cloth, a hot favourite, and it was somewhat of a novelty for Donoghue's backers to get sevens and tens to their money in one afternoon. Desmond House, which won over this course in April, continued Pope's run of success by a belated, but successful challenge, in the Harborough Handicap. Backers of favourites were quite out of it, and they were again on the wrong track when Pallene beat a big field in the Leicestershire November Selling Plate, but they had a turn in their favour when Vindictive got a flying start, and led throughout in the Apethorpe Nursery, Captain Bewicke's filly being joint favourite with Vaddy, which finished third, Traitress filly splitting the pair. In the concluding event, False Piety cleverly landed the odds betted on him. Details:—

RACEHORSE v. MOTOR.

HORSE WINS.

A Press Association telegram, dated Paris, Tuesday, states:—According to "The Auto," a racehorse named Abbay yesterday defeated a 30 h.p. motor car in a race over 500 metres. The horse, which was ridden by the correspondent of the Morning Post, was allowed a flying start, whereas the car started from a stationary position. The conditions were that the car must overtake the horse before 500 metres had been covered, otherwise the horse won. The animal actually negotiated 334 metres before it was caught up. About 20,000 francs were staked on the result, of which 20 per cent. goes to the Ramsey Foundation for enabling young French chemists to continue their studies in England.

INMAN v. REECE.

Continuing their match at Leicester square, London, yesterday afternoon, both players were in good form, but the scoring went in favour of Inman. The best breaks were 111, 101, 79, 67, and 303, by Inman; and 129, 71, 110, 129, and 95 by Reece. Interval scores—Reece (rec. 1,000), 9,581; Inman (in play), 8,321.

A keenly interesting duel between these players at night again ended in favour of Inman, who scored 857 against 530, averaging 95 against 66. Inman owed much for his improved position to a great all-round break of 551, ended at a not too difficult run-through cannon. It was a fine effort, revealing Inman at his best. Reece's best break was 147, including a sequence of 62 close cannons. Closing scores—Reece, 10,111; Inman, 9,178.

SMITH v. FALKINER.

Continuing their game of 16,000 up, both Smith and Falkiner gave a splendid display at Orme's Manchester yesterday. Extending his unfinished item to 212, Smith was later responsible for the best effort of the session, a brilliant 278, also adding 92 and 71. Falkiner replied with 196, 75, 116, and 117 (unfinished). Interval scores:—Falkiner, 10,038; Smith, 9,240.

Closing scores:—Falkiner, 10,038; Smith (in play), 9,857.

STEVENSON v. AIKEN.

In this tournament heat at Burroughes' Hall, London, yesterday afternoon, Stevenson completely outplayed the Scottish champion, who only scored 40 points for the session. Stevenson made his 97 unfinished into 103, and afterwards added breaks of 313, 73, and 115 (unfinished). Interval scores: Stevenson (rec. 500), 10,186; Aiken (rec. 1,500), 7,281.

BOY'S DEATH FROM A KICK.—A verdict of death of accidental death was returned at an inquest held by Dr. Louis A. Byrne, City Coroner, at the Mater Misericordiæ Hospital, Dublin, yesterday, touching the death of Joseph Callaghan (aged 11), who lived at Finglas Bridge. IRISH-AMERICAN ARRIVALS IN DUBLIN.—Some two hundred Irish-American passengers arrived at the North Wall yesterday morning. They travelled by the Holyhead-Dublin express steamer Arvonia. These visitors were considerably worried with their luggage, which had been searched on arrival in England, in the first instance, and again across-Channel before embarking for Ireland. At the North Wall it was necessary for them to look after the conveyance of their luggage to the cabs or cars.

DUBLIN-BOUND VESSELS DELAYED BY STORM.—Incoming cross-Channel steamers to Dublin yesterday morning were again delayed by the severity of the weather conditions obtaining in the Irish Sea. The ss. Lady Carlow, from Liverpool, arrived at 12.30; the Olive, of the Laird Line, from Heysham, at noon; whilst the Burns Line steamer Magpie, from Glasgow, reached Dublin at 10 a.m. Smaller vessels than the regular cross-Channel steamers appear to have had strenuous crossings of the Irish Sea, and some craft which normally should have reached the Liffey on Monday or yesterday, were stated to be weather-bound awaiting a modification of conditions before sailing for the Liffey.

ELECTRICAL POWER ENGINEERS THREATEN TO STRIKE.

A national strike of technical supervisory and executive engineers at the electricity undertakings who are members of the Electrical Power Engineers' Association is threatened on December 14th, unless there is a settlement of the dispute which has arisen over the new wages schedule. The strike notices were originally intended to expire in a fortnight, but have been extended to December 14th, to enable the employers' side of the National Joint Board to persuade the undertakings concerned to observe the schedules. The whole of the municipal and private electricity undertakings of 1,000 kilowatts and over in England, Scotland, Ireland, and Wales are involved, the total number, including London, being 240.

Eight Bolsheviks who were recently arrested in the Baltic Sea on the way to Helsingfors have been handed over from the steamship Ariadne to the British naval authorities at Danzig. They will be sent to the Finnish-Russian frontier in exchange for British prisoners released from Baku.

INNINGS DEFEAT OF VICTORIA.

FINE BOWLING BY RHODES AND WOOLLEY.

(PRESS ASSOCIATION FOREIGN SPECIAL.)

MELBOURNE, Nov. 16.

Following the heavy rain of yesterday, which prevented a ball being bowled all day in the match between M.C.C. and Victoria, the weather this morning was fine and pleasantly cool. It was at first announced that there would be no play before lunch, but the pitch recovered so rapidly under the influence of the sun and wind that an earlier start became possible, and after frequent inspections of the wicket it was decided to resume the game at a quarter past one o'clock. In the outfield the grass had grown remarkably since Saturday. The Englishmen were greatly surprised by the quick drying properties of the wicket.

Punctually to time the not outs, Hearne (82) and Hendren (77) continued the M.C.C. first innings, while M'Donald and Mullett shared the attack. The bowlers were provided with plenty of sawdust. Only three overs were delivered before lunch, which was taken with the total at 354 for two wickets, Hendren's score then being 86. There was only a small attendance when play was resumed. Hearne, after scoring a single, was smartly taken at mid-off by Ryder off the third ball of M'Donald's first over after lunch. The retiring batsman was at the wicket for three hours and a half for his 87, and, although he had only made three fours, he played very sound and correct cricket. The third wicket went down at 355, and Woolley was next in. The newcomer at once began to force matters, and brought off some fine strokes to leg and good drives, while Hendren also batted attractively, advancing his score chiefly by powerful driving. The Middlesex man reached three figures amid applause all round the ground, and simultaneously the fourth century was signalled. With the total at 408 for three wickets, Hendren (106) and Woolley (36), Douglas declared the innings closed. It was then 3 o'clock, and the innings had occupied altogether just over six hours. M'Donald took two wickets for 85 runs, and Ryder one for 76.

Wanting 144 runs to avoid the single innings defeat, Victoria commenced their second venture with Mayne and Park. Woolley and Rhodes were heartily cheered on coming out to bowl. The batsmen were very cautious at the start, and the score rose slowly to 23, when Mayne was caught at deep mid-off by Hendren in Rhodes' seventh over for 11. Willis followed in, but in the same over, and before any addition had been made to the total, Park, who had scored 12, was out leg before. With Lampard in Willis was smartly taken in the slips by Fender off Woolley, the third wicket falling at 33, and one run later Lampard was also caught in slips off the Kent bowler. Two more wickets fell with the total unaltered, Ryder being clean bowled by Rhodes, and Moyes being smartly stumped off the Yorkshire bowler's next ball. It was a bowlers' wicket, and at this point Rhodes had secured 4 for 15. With Ransford and Liddicut associated a stand was made, and 36 runs were added before Ransford was secured by Fender in the long field off Rhodes for 21. Liddicut, who had then scored 13, was next partnered by M'Donald, but after making three the latter was caught at extra mid-off by Douglas off Rhodes. Eight wickets had now fallen for 84, and with the total at 85 the innings was brought to a conclusion, Ellis being stumped off Woolley for one, and the same bowler accounting for Mullett's wicket. The innings lasted eight minutes under two hours, and the Englishmen received a hearty ovation as they returned to the pavilion.

During the afternoon it was announced that if the matches between M.C.C. and the various States are not completed at the end of four days they will be continued for two hours on the fifth day. All the Test matches will be played to a finish. Rhodes' full analysis was 19 overs, 4 maidens, 39 runs, and 6 wickets, and Woolley's 15 overs, 6 maidens, 27 runs, and 4 wickets.

VISCOUNT GREY AND HOME RULE BILL.

It is understood, says the Press Association, that Lord Grey of Falloden will break his long silence on political questions by taking part next week in the House of Lords debate on the second reading of the Home Rule Bill.

The Railway Crisis.

Yesterday an All-Ireland Labour Congress discussed at great length the question whether the present munitions strike should be abandoned or should be maintained to the bitter end. Apart from the British Government, four different sets of interests are involved. The Republican movement and the political leaders of Irish Labour have supported the strike for their own reasons. The railwaymen and their families, to the number of some fifty thousand persons, have a direct and vital concern in this issue. The remaining set of interests—by far the most widely reaching and important—is that of the Irish people as a whole. The character and result of the Labour Congress can be summarised in a few sentences. The Labour Party and the railwaymen now recognise the full consequences of the challenge which they have thrown down to the British Government. They see that the fight must inflict enormous losses on the country and will have no guarantee of financial support from it. Therefore, while the more ardent spirits wish to declare war, nobody wants to accept the responsibility for declaring it. The Labour leaders were careful to insist yesterday that the railwaymen began the struggle, and the railwaymen showed a distinct reluctance to admit that it would have begun without the promptings of the Labour leaders. Finally, a resolution was adopted of which the purport was, in the language of the card-table, "I leave it to you, partner." The Irish people are invited to throw all their resources into a hopeless and devastating conflict with British power—if the railwaymen decide in favour of such a conflict. Irish Labour is prepared to reduce the country to a state of chaos, but it is the railwaymen who, on their sole responsibility, must cry "Havock!" and let slip the dogs of war.

The situation to-day is governed by two facts. One is the impending stoppage of three of the four main railway systems of Ireland. The Midland Great Western Company may put up its shutters at any moment. We announce this morning that, at the present rate of dismissals, the Great Southern Company will be unable to "carry on" for many days and is preparing to give notice of disemployment to all its staffs. A fortnight from now—if the men maintain their present attitude—Ireland may be groaning under all the sufferings of an economic blockade. The other dominating fact is the new position of the railwaymen. Until yesterday they supposed themselves to be coworkers in a national movement, equally responsible with their partners—but not more responsible—for the declaration and consequences of war. To-day, by the vote of Irish Labour, the whole issue hangs on the railwaymen's verdict. They must decide the fate not only of their own families, but of a million other families in Ireland. They must bring peace or war to all Ireland, as the Roman legate brought it, in the fold of his toga, to Tarentum. Therefore, the railwaymen must act at once. They, and they alone, must decide immediately whether, as fathers, they will allow their children to starve, and whether, as Irishmen, they will decree their country's ruin. Their great union also is compelled by yesterday's decision to cease to be a mere spectator of the crisis in Ireland. Trade unionism has become a farce if twenty thousand Irish railwaymen, on whom Irish Labour, as a whole, has imposed a momentous choice, are to get no guidance from the National Union of Railwaymen. If Mr. J. H. Thomas and his Executive decide for peace, they ought to offer themselves immediately as negotiators between the Irish railway companies and their servants.

Mr. Thomas Johnson, the Labour leader, said yesterday that an economic war with England would throw back the social life of Ireland for, perhaps, a hundred years. He spoke truly and frankly. The Irish railwaymen must choose within the next few days whether that fate is to be invited or averted. In making their decision they are entitled to know the views of every great interest which it must involve. They are entitled, as we have said, to know the views of their own trade union, and they have an even stronger right to know the opinions and wishes of the Irish people. They heard the voice of Labour yesterday; let them now hear the voice of industry and commerce. Since the crisis began that voice has been strangely silent. Yesterday at the Labour Congress the Lord Mayor of Dublin took the remarkable position that "it was not for him"—the Chief Magistrate of the Capital of Ireland—to contribute an opinion to an issue on which that capital's very existence is at stake. We say deliberately that, if the Irish railwaymen decide for war, the country's farmers, traders, and captains of industry will not be able to escape some share of responsibility for that fatal choice. The stoppage of the railways is not a political issue: it is an economic issue of the most vital importance. It affects the shareholders of every railway, bank, and commercial company in the land; the cattle industry, the shipping trade, the motor trade, the manufacture and distribution of food supplies. Yet our Chambers of Commerce and farmers' unions have refused generally to give expression to the views of these interests, which are also the views of the vast body of public opinion in Ireland. A silent public opinion, however, is a useless public opinion, and a decision by any section of the community which is formed in vacuo is more likely to be wrong than right. Now is the time—a fortnight hence may be too late—when the country should tell the railwaymen, through every representative agency which it possesses, that it demands their verdict against a foolish, calamitous, and hopeless war on Ireland.

The Greek Elections.

The result of the Greek elections comes as a sad disappointment to the friends of Hellas. The Greeks are a strange people, easily susceptible to insidious influence and unstable as the waters of the sea which bathes their shores. It is impossible to say why they have rejected the man who saved them and gave them Greater Greece. The fact remains that M. Venizelos and all his Ministers, except two, have been worsted at the polls. Not a single Government candidate was returned in Macedonia or in any division of Old Greece, except Epirus and the isles. Although the final figures are not yet to hand, therefore, a substantial Opposition majority in the new Parliament is fairly certain. The Government has resigned already, and M. Rhallis has been entrusted with the formation of a Cabinet. The problem of the Greek succession now becomes acute. M. Venizelos stood for the absolute exclusion of ex-King Constantine and the Duke of Sparta from the throne, while his opponents were led by an agent of "Tino." The result of the voting, consequently, suggests that Greece has declared in favour of Constantine's restoration, and, for aught we know, such, indeed, may be the case. Modern Greece, however, was created by the Allies, and large tracts of new territory were added to the late King Alexander's possessions on the distinct understanding that Constantine's exile should be permanent. According to the Paris Matin, the Allies have decided now to place an absolute veto on Constantine's return. Who, then, will be King of the Hellenes? Two main factors govern the situation. One is the will of the Greek people, the other is the authority of the guaranteeing Powers. There seems to be only one way in which the deadlock can be resolved. Constantine is completely out of the question; but the Allies, in the circumstances, might be disposed to allow his eldest son to return. Prince George, Duke of Sparta, was banished with his father in 1917, and since that time he has become engaged to be married to one of the daughters of the King of Rumania. His marriage with an Allied princess might cut the Gordian knot; but, if his father insists on returning to Athens, the Allies will be forced to prevent him. In the meanwhile M. Venizelos has passed into the shadows with M. Clemenceau and President Wilson. All three have been rejected by the people whom they served, but their names will be remembered while history endures.

Persia.

Earl Curzon's statement in the House of Lords yesterday should do much to confound those thoughtless critics of the Foreign Office who have been denouncing our commitments in Persia as the product of a strained imperialism. The Foreign Secretary reminded his audience of some important facts. During the war Persia, at any moment, might have become a dangerous theatre of operations. Britain, therefore, recognising Persia's importance to her interests, devoted all her efforts in that country to the steadying of the political situation. The policy succeeded, but it involved Britain in various undertakings. Peace came, and on its arrival Turkey and Russia slipped into chaos, leaving Persia marooned in a sea of wild confusion. "A peaceful, stable, friendly, and independent Persia," said Earl Curzon, "was the corner-stone of our policy"; and, but for British influence and guidance, the country undoubtedly would have perished. In order that its integrity might be assured the Anglo-Persian Agreement was concluded. There never was any question either of a protectorate or a mandate. The Government's only desire was to enable Persia to withstand the buffetings of the Bolshevism and anarchy which surrounded it. Naturally, expense was involved, and British soldiers were engaged in the country's protection. When the agreement was signed the British troops were withdrawn gradually from the South, but the little force which remains in the North-West constitutes Persia's only barrier against the Bolsheviks. If it be withdrawn now, the birth of a Soviet in Teheran will not be long delayed. Nevertheless, Earl Curzon said that, if the Persian Government would not ratify the agreement, which he described as "the sole possible guarantee for the continued stability of Persia," it would be left to its own devices. He has told Persia that Britain may not be able to prolong her military support beyond next spring, and the agreement will be brought before the Parliament at Teheran in the early part of the year. Delay in ratification has been due to the "pedantic and foolish policy" of the Shah's Government; but, until the matter of the agreement is settled in one way or the other, British policy in Persia must mark time.

Crime in Dublin.

The fact that crime, when once tolerated by a civilised community, cannot be confined behind the flimsy barriers of "politics" is being demonstrated almost daily in Dublin's streets. On Saturday evening a daring robbery was committed in the Dublin Savings Bank in Lower Abbey street, and yesterday, in the broad light of noon, over £2,000 was robbed from the Pembroke Branch of the National Bank at Baggot street Bridge. The methods adopted by the robbers were the same in both cases. A number of men entered the banks, put pistols at the heads of the officials, and removed their booty. Like so many other criminals in Ireland of late, they vanished, apparently, into thin air. These and similar robberies have nothing to do with politics, but nowadays it seems that any man with a pistol can do what he likes in Ireland. Naturally enough, professional "cracksmen" are seizing their opportunity. They can pass muster as Sinn Feiners or servants of the Crown, as the occasion demands. They will rob a bank or a poor-box as cheerfully, and as successfully, in the name of the King as in the name of the Republic. The tragic part of it all is that the Irish people are conniving unconsciously at these marauders' immunity from detection.

THE HOLYHEAD MAILS CONTRACT

TO GO TO LONDON AND NORTH-WESTERN COMPANY.

Our London Correspondent telegraphed last night:—Both English and Irish members of the House of Commons were greatly interested in the motion made by the Secretary to the Treasury to-day, indicating that the new contract for the carriage of the mails between Holyhead and Kingstown goes to the London and North-Western Railway Company. It becomes operative on the 28th instant. Hitherto, for nearly one hundred years, the contract has been placed with the City of Dublin Steam Packet Company, who, through their friends in Parliament, have always succeeded in resisting any attempts at transfer when the renewal question arose. It is said that the North-Western Company are to receive a payment of considerably less per year than the City of Dublin Company. The former have lately added two fine boats to their fleet; the latter lost two during the war.

CITY OF DUBLIN COMPANY HAVE NO INFORMATION.

When he made inquiries at the offices of the City of Dublin Steam Packet Company in regard to the question of the mails contract, an Irish Times representative yesterday was directed by the Secretary to the statement made by the Chairman (Mr. Edward Watson) at the meeting of the company on the 9th inst., to the effect that "We did not hear anything from the Post Office until the 13th October, when we had a letter asking us if we would make any modification in our figures, and also taking exception to what we proposed in regard to the parcel post. It was difficult to understand from the specification what the Post Office really meant, and we wrote asking for further information and only received an indefinite reply . . ." Mr. Jones explained that the company had had no further information from the Post Office in regard to the contract since the meeting of the company, and therefore there was nothing to add to the chairman's statement.

ARRIVAL OF LORD FRENCH.

Viscount French returned to Ireland, via Kingstown, yesterday evening, and proceeded by motor to Dublin. The usual military guard was in attendance.

LONDON CORRESPONDENCE.

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
TUESDAY NIGHT.

The news from Greece has come like a bombshell, dispelling all preconceived ideas as to the homogeneity of that rather troublesome kingdom. The campaign carried on for months past by the "Tinoists" has been successful, and the huge amount of money poured out in propaganda from Switzerland has had its effect. Only last week a long telegram was sent from Lugano to nearly every paper in the country, describing the situation in Athens as it appeared to the Constantine party. The victory, however, is likely to be a hollow one. The Kingdom of Greece is guaranteed by the powers of Great Britain, France, and Russia, and it is the two first that have given Greece territory since the war that has doubled her possessions and population.

In these circumstances, it is unlikely that they will agree to the return of a man whose double-dealing with the common enemy cost them both so dearly in lives and treasure. His treachery has been made so clear to all the world that few Powers of importance would care to have dealings with any Government of which Constantine was head. It is probable that M. Gounaris, who was exiled with Constantine, will be called upon to form a Government, though M. Ralliss, a moderate opponent of M. Venizelos, has accepted the task. For the moment it is an extraordinary commentary upon the mutability of human affairs that M. Venizelos, whose genius has added a population of several millions to his country since 1912, should have been so overwhelmed.

Among the many thousands of visitors to the Cenotaph to-day was Captain Gomensora, of the Brazilian Dreadnought San Paulo, who placed a wreath on the monument from the Brazilian Navy. The crowds still continue to visit the Cenotaph in great numbers, and the stacks of flowers have now become hillocks. A van arrived to-day, laden with beautiful wreaths from all parts of the country, forwarded through a kindly agency from people unable to be present themselves. The barricades round the Cenotaph were removed to-day, a sign that the authorities now think that the great rush is over.

There has been quite a flutter in theatrical circles during the past few days regarding the alleged refusal of the Irish Players at the Ambassadors' Theatre to join all the other London players in sending a wreath to the Armistice Day celebration at Drury Lane Theatre. It has now been made clear beyond a doubt that the Irish Players were never asked to send, and Mr. Arthur Lewis, of Drury Lane, says that they are right, though there was no error at Drury Lane. The fault lies elsewhere, he says, for nearly every member of the Irish Players' Company lost a relative in the war. Miss Maire O'Neill, Miss Sara Allgood, and eleven members of the company playing in "The White-Headed Boy" write saying that they were never asked to subscribe. The mistake has been an unpleasant one for these players, and it ought to be traced to its source.

As a retort in kind to American resolutions in regard to Ireland, it has been suggested that this country should interest itself in regard to the severities alleged to have been practised by United States troops in Haiti. The Government, needless to say, have given no encouragement to the suggestion. When questioned on the subject to-day, Mr. Harmsworth contented himself with saying that no request for intervention had been received from the Haitian Government.

Mr. Churchill was the central figure of question time, and showed unusual tartness in his replies. Sir W. Joynson-Hicks, who repeated his inquiry whether we were going to hand over Mesopotamia to the rebels, was told that there had never been any such suggestion. What the Government meant to do was to set up an Arab State, and help it to maintain law and order. For that purpose the 100 Rolls-Royce chassis, just ordered by the War Office (at an expense not named) would be very useful. Mr. Hogge thereupon announced his intention to "reduce" the Army Estimates by the amount of their cost, to which the War Minister sarcastically replied "You will move"—implying that there was no chance of his motion being carried. He was very sarcastic, too, at the expense of members who urged that greater precautions should be taken to protect soldiers in Ireland. After five years of a dreadful war, he observed, we might credit the military authorities with possessing a little common-sense, and, "odd as it might seem," all the considerations mentioned had occurred to them. In answer to a Labour member he declared that no individual soldier had ever been proved to have been engaged in reprisals.

The Ulster peers and members of Parliament, and a deputation from the Ulster Unionist Council, had a conference to-day at Londonderry House (the residence of the Marquis of Londonderry) with reference to the attitude to be adopted towards the Home Rule Bill as before the House of Lords. It may be assumed that the feeling was strongly in favour of making every effort to prevent any weakening of the safeguards which are provided in the Bill for Northern Ireland and its separate Parliament. The prospects of the Bill were much discussed in the Lobby to-day. One of the members who spoke on the subject was Lord Hugh Cecil, who expressed regret that Lord Midleton and his friends of the Irish Anti-Partition League proposed to move amendments in favour of one Second Chamber for the two Parliaments. "This," said his lordship, "is an attempt to smother the only part of the Bill that has any substantial backing."

"The Clubman," writing in the Pall Mall Gazette to-day, says that he is unable to obtain any confirmation of the rumour current in political circles just now that the Irish Lord Chancellor, Sir James Campbell, is to become Lord Justice of Appeal in England, and that he will be succeeded by Mr. Denis Henry, the Irish Attorney-General. Lord Atkinson's retirement, which is believed to be impending, would, of course, render such changes highly probable.

The Prime Minister will be asked by Mr. Malone to-morrow if he will publish all papers concerning the negotiations which have taken place at Lord Carnarvon's house and elsewhere between British representatives and Mr. Arthur Griffith and other members of the Sinn Fein organisation.

MR. ASQUITH AND THE MUNITIONS MINISTRY.

Mr. Asquith authorises the following statement with reference to Mr. Hope's letter, published on Monday:—The letter of the Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Munitions, which challenges the accuracy of the figures he gave on Saturday regarding the expenditure of the Ministry, proves the necessity of constantly checking the Government's own figures. Mr. Asquith took £65,000,000 as the estimated gross expenditure of the Ministry of Munitions from Command Paper 802, issued by the Treasury on June 30. He was aware that as a result of a debate on a motion to reduce the Munitions Vote, proposed by Sir Donald Maclean, the Government were forced to withdraw the original estimate on April 15th. He did not imagine that in a statement of expenditure issued on June 30th the Treasury would repeat the estimate which had been withdrawn ten weeks before. He finds, however, that the revised estimate for the Ministry was not issued till July 22nd, and that in it the gross expenditure is not £19,000,000, as stated by Mr. Hope, but £38,000,000, when Votes 1 and 2 of the unclassified are taken together, as is done in the Treasury paper.

ADDITIONAL RESIDENT MAGISTRATE FOR CLARE.

The Lords Justices have appointed Mr. William Quinlan Murphy, R.M. for County Kerry, to be an additional Resident Magistrate for County Clare.

According to the private advices from Kattowitz, a German arms store was seized in the Rybnik district on Sunday.

MURDER CHARGE IN DUBLIN.

TWO LIMERICK MEN COURTMARTIALLED.

AN ATTACK ON THREE CONSTABLES.

A sequel to a shooting affray in Limerick took place yesterday, when a general courtmartial assembled at Marlborough Barracks, Dublin, for the purpose of trying two young men named James O'Neill and Patrick Blake, both of Limerick, on a charge of the murder of Constable Walter Oakley, R.I.C., at Limerick on the 29th July last. There was an alternative charge of manslaughter.

Mr. R. Kinahan (instructed by Mr. H. O'B. Moran, solicitor, Limerick) appeared for O'Neill, and Mr. Charles Power (also instructed by Mr. Moran) for Blake.

The Court had arranged to sit at 2.30 o'clock, but over an hour elapsed when the proceedings began. During the opening formalities and until after the arraignment of the accused the Press and public were excluded.

PRELIMINARY POINT.

A member of the English Bar appeared to prosecute, and, when the proceedings were made public, Mr. Kinahan asked was this gentleman subject to military law, and was he a member of the Irish Bar.

The Prosecuting Counsel said that, strictly speaking, he supposed he was not subject to military law, but he was not a member of the Irish Bar.

Mr. Kinahan said that then he objected to his status to act as counsel for the prosecution. His objection was made under Rule 93 of the Army Act. Normally these men would have been tried in Limerick at the Assizes, but under the Restoration of Order Act they had been transferred to the military court. He contended that counsel must be qualified in the country in which the courtmartial was held. The object of this was to provide that any breach of etiquette committed by counsel could be punished by the Benchers of the Inn to which he belonged. The Benchers of this gentleman's Inn had no jurisdiction over him in Ireland, nor had the Benchers of the Irish Inn, because he did not belong to it. He (Mr. Kinahan) had had to refuse briefs in England because he was not a member of the English Bar.

The Prosecuting Counsel said that he was a barrister-at-law, and, as such, wherever practising, was subject to the rules of the profession. He saw nothing in the rule that a barrister who practised in England before a courtmartial must be a member of the English Bar, and in Ireland a member of the Irish Bar.

Mr. Kinahan said that the prosecutor could not practise in Scotland, no more than he could practice in Ireland. He (Mr. Kinahan) could not appear in any court in England.

The court was then closed to consider the objection, and, on re-opening, the President said that they had considered the objection, made a note of it, and had over-ruled it.

CASE FOR THE PROSECUTION.

The Prosecuting Counsel, in opening the case, said that the charge against the accused was that on the 29th July they were a party to the commission of a murder. They were part of a force of armed men acting in concert for the purpose in Limerick of depriving three constables of the R.I.C. of their arms, and when, not unnaturally, they refused to give them up, one of those constables was shot. If any one of the accused was guilty of taking the life of Constable Oakley, and others were assisting in what they knew to be an unlawful act, all were in the eye of the law guilty of the murder. Proceeding to state the facts, counsel said that on the afternoon of the 24th July three constables—Constable Oakley and two others who were brothers—were walking down Henry street in Limerick on their way to the R.I.C. barrack, situated in Frederick street. They passed on the right-hand side of the road the entrance to the school, and went to Franklin's corner. At the school Constable Oakley was walking between his two brother constables. On arriving at the corner three men sprang out upon them suddenly, calling—"Hands up, and give us your arms." These three men had pistols in their hands, and were almost touching the constables, at whom they pointed the pistols. One was so close to one of the constables that the latter knocked up the arm bearing the pistol, which was fired, and the bullet hit the constable in the right shoulder. The assailant, whoever he was, dropped the pistol, and the constable, picking it up, fired it at him as the man ran away. The constable's impression was that the man who ran away towards the barracks fell. One of the assailants who fired at Oakley was seen by the second constable. The effect of that fire was that Oakley was wounded in the right arm. Almost simultaneously, and undoubtedly by design, five men appeared in Newenham street, almost opposite. They came down to the corner of Henry street, and a female witness, who was standing at the gate of the school, saw those persons. At the corner they divided into two groups, one composed of three men and the other composed of two men, and all these men were armed. The group of three shot at the first constable, who returned the fire, and wounded the centre man of the three. All three took aim at him again, and the constable, who had an excellent opportunity of identifying them, was hit in the left arm, and fell down. The constable identified one of the three men as the accused man, O'Neill. The second constable, who had previously dropped his rifle, regained possession of it, and as he was about firing it again Constable Oakley fell against him, and he carried the latter into Franklin's shop. In a few seconds the constable came out again, and saw a man going in the direction of Newenham street, and he gave chase, but the man got away. Three of the five men who were seen to fire passed by the female witness, and went up Henry street, in the north-eastern direction. One of these men she had seen in Limerick before, knew him by sight, and recognised him—that was the accused man Blake. She saw him on occasions after that, and before he was arrested. She had also seen O'Neill, and picked him out from amongst other persons in the police barracks. Constable Oakley was taken to the barracks, where it was found he had a bullet wound above the top of the right hip bone. A specialist was sent for from Cork, and he performed an operation, but Constable Oakley died on the 29th July. On the 13th August O'Neill was arrested, and a few days later Blake was also arrested, and both were identified. Blake, when cautioned, became extremely nervous and excited, and said—"Me, sir, I did not do it." O'Neill, when cautioned, and who immediately made recourse to a defence which was strangely popular in this part of the world—an alibi—said—"I can prove I was not there. I was in bed at the time, attended by a doctor. It was a Saturday evening. I am nearly sure it is. I got out of Barrington's Hospital after six o'clock. It is going from bad to worse. Is it on suspicion I am arrested? Either I was in hospital or came out of hospital that night. The best thing I can do now is to cut my throat. I am as innocent as that dog there." This alibi was inquired into, and evidence would be called to show that that was entirely untrue. Concluding, counsel said that he had placed before the Court the evidence, to be adduced very shortly, suggesting that the probability was that the person who fired the shot which killed Constable Oakley was one of the three men who met the constables at Franklin's corner. It mattered not if they were not acting in concert, as it was, however obvious they were, everyone of them was equally guilty with the other of the murder of Constable Oakley.

THE EVIDENCE.

An R.I.C. constable stated that on July 24th he was on patrol with the deceased and another constable. On reaching the corner of Windmill street and Henry street several men sprang out, armed with revolvers, and they ordered them (the patrol) to put up their hands and hand over their arms. These men numbered five or six. They refused to give up their arms, and at about the same time he noticed five men behind, in two sections of three and two. He left the corner and ran out into the road, and the group of three behind them opened fire on him. They did not hit him the first time. He was in "Black and Tan" uniform. He returned the fire with his revolver, and hit the centre man of the three, but got hit himself then and fell. He only fired one shot, and when he hit the centre man the other two fired back, and a bullet hit him in the left arm. The prisoner O'Neill was one of these men. At a later date a number of men were paraded in the police barracks, and among them he saw O'Neill, whom he picked out.

Cross-examined by Mr. Kinahan, witness said he had five years' Army service, having enlisted on September 1st, 1914. They were completely surprised by the crowd, which jumped out very close to them, and he broke away. The group of two never fired at him. The men he hit got up. The men he picked O'Neill out of numbered about a dozen, some of whom were wearing trench coats, but not the majority.

I put it to you, the only man in the bunch without a collar was the man O'Neill? I did not notice whether O'Neill had a collar on or not.

Replying to further questions, the witness said that after he was wounded he went up to some soldiers he saw at the top of Newenham street. He knew two men had been arrested, and he was on the look-out for two.

In answer to the Prosecutor, witness said that he went up Newenham street because he knew it was useless to stand still and be fired at.

To the President—The whole thing took less than two minutes. He did not see any arms with the group of two.

Another policeman, a brother of the last witness, was then examined, and gave evidence as to Constable Oakley, his brother, and himself being "held up" on the afternoon in question by three armed men, who demanded their arms. One of the men had a pistol in his hand, and witness knocked it up. The pistol went off in falling to the ground. Witness picked it up and fired it twice at one of the men who was going down Henry street, in the direction of the barrack. The man fell and got up. He could not see what happened to the other two men. As Constable Oakley drew his revolver to fire he was shot through the right hip by the centre man of the three. Witness's brother ran on to the street. Constable Oakley fell against witness, and he took him into Franklin's shop. When witness came out again he saw a man running across up Newenham street. He could not say if this man took part in the "hold up" or not. He ran after the man, but lost him round the corner. He then saw five men coming from the direction of Newenham street, towards Windmill street. They were carrying revolvers or pistols. He did not see where they went to, and could not identify them.

Cross-examined by Mr. Kinahan, witness said that his brother broke away from the "hold up." He did not see a running fight between these men and his brother in Newenham street. He did not go to the assistance of his brother as he did not see him after leaving Constable Oakley in the shop. He looked for him, and found him afterwards in a private house and after he had reported the occurrence at the barrack. He heard shots before he brought Oakley into Franklin's and when in there.

In the course of further cross-examination, witness said that he had attended a parade in William street barrack yard on a different date to his brother, when he identified a man named Kelly.

Answering the Prosecuting Counsel, witness said that it was about a quarter of an hour after he reported the affair at the barrack that he found his brother.

Replying to the President, witness said that the men who shot Oakley was as tall as himself, and he (witness) only weighed 11 stone. Oakley was first shot in the right hand, and then from behind above the hip. He could not walk and had to be partly carried.

The Court at this stage adjourned until ten o'clock to-day.

GOETHE'S "FAUST" IN BERLIN.

THE ORIGINAL DRAMA.

A RHEINHARDT PRODUCTION.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

BERLIN, NOVEMBER 10.

With characteristic genius in the work of putting before his public the choicest literary productions of dramatic art, Max Rheinhardt has at last brought out Goethe's "Urfaust," as it is known in German. The work known as "Faust" in the form of the opera—the form, perhaps, best known both in Great Britain and in Germany—is the theme of Goethe's immortal poem. Goethe, like Shakespeare, did not evolve the themes of his poems from his own imagination, nor, like his immortal English counterpart, did he take the bare story over in the original traditional form. In their master-productions both poets caught, in the age-long legends of their day, the spirit of a great idea, a universal truth and, while preserving the spirit and, to some extent, the classical mould of the story, transfigured them and infused them with the spirit of genius. Both, moreover, in their masterpieces furnished the world with no finished work, the product of a short reflective period in the manner to-day so relatively frequent.

The "Faust" of Goethe, like the "Hamlet" of Shakespeare, was the growth of many years moulded and modified by the deepening experience and reflection of a poet's life-time. The interest of scholars naturally attaching to such a work has led to many a research into the manner of its development. Until 1887 it was believed that the earlier manuscripts of Goethe's "Faust" had been destroyed by the author, until, in the papers left behind on the death of one of the court ladies to the Duchess Anna Amalia of Sachsen-Weimar, a manuscript copy of the original was found. The work was awaited with great expectation, and was published shortly afterwards under the title "Goethe's Faust in the Original Form." Since then it has been referred to as the "Urfaust." This is the form of the poem which Rheinhardt has staged for us.

Of all the ways in which I have seen "Faust" played—and I have seen many—I have never found one which has impressed me more. The form of the story of "Faust" with which the public has grown familiar is the version of the opera. It does not differ materially from the usual version of the drama. But just as Shakespeare had to choose from a number of popular current forms of the legends embodied in his plays, handed down through history largely by word of mouth, so Goethe had to make a choice of material. The "Urfaust," being the original form of the story as it came from Goethe's hand, differs considerably from the familiar and later version, and, seen for the first time, leaves one wondering at times what has gone wrong with the story. Here and there one finds too much in the play. Here and there the actors seem to take unpardonable liberty with the text. But ever and anon it strikes back to the familiar path, and one catches up again the original idea. There is a grim ruggedness about the whole production, a sense of titanic awesomeness in the metre and rhythm of the poetry. At one time the whole theatre is paralysed into horror by the use of a word more drastic to a modern ear than the explosive prank of Mr. Bernard Shaw in "Pygmalion" or of Shakespeare in his most lurid moments.

Familiarity with the thread of the story has enabled Rheinhardt to use to great effect the mode of stage expression used in "Frühlings Erwachen." The "Urfaust" is produced in the Deutsches Theatre. This theatre has a rotating stage, and the whole of the stage floor can be raised bodily by a mechanism like that of an ordinary passenger lift. Thus the scenes can be prepared beforehand, and, one after another, can be put before the public in rapid succession. In this production the stage is dressed in the form of a church window, or long, narrow picture-frame running to a point at the top. It gives a mediæval air to the work. Then, in rapid succession, one scene follows upon another, so that one gets but suggestive extracts from Goethe's work, and is left to fill in the gaps for oneself.

Hardly on any stage have I found an effect so deeply impressive and so awe-inspiring. One is all the time in the atmosphere of the occult, and feels the ice-cold breath of the spirit world. The long, midnight soliloquy of the study-worn scholar, the calling up of the Prince of Spirits, who appears as a phosphorescent face against an intense darkness, the mental anguish of the student once committed to his course of action, the conversation of Mephistopheles with the young aspirant to knowledge, the scene in the wine-cellar, the first meeting with Margaret, the scenes in the village street, the stroll in the garden, the women at the well, the soul agony of the penitent sinner in the church, the return of the soldier, and the final scene in the prison—which in this version is the final scene—all fill one with a succession of emotions which Rheinhardt has exploited to the full.

One cannot omit to say a word about the technique of the sounds on the stage in this production. The weirdness of the creaking in the study, the rising, howling, moaning of the wind at midnight on the appearance of Mephistopheles, the thunder and rain in the storm scene, the tolling of the church bell at Mass, the pealing of a distant organ, the clanking of chains—these contribute to that arresting spell which Rheinhardt's interpretation of the "Urfaust" casts over one. It is played right through with only one short break, so that the continuity of the effect is not lost.

Of the characters themselves the usual rendering is fairly well retained. Margaret is a character rarely met with to-day. Her naïveté and indecision recall Shakespeare's Ophelia. Faust needs a fine actor, with an appreciation of the author's spirit. Mephistopheles—a character as it were without any centre of attraction, a personality without a soul, an entity outside of the range of the human and calculable, but a symbol of dynamic forces at work upon human destiny—receives a new fascination from the interpretation of Rheinhardt. Right through the whole piece there is the same characteristic feature which distinguishes the tragedies of Shakespeare—mankind in the grip of, and in conflict with, supernormal forces, recognising their perilous nature and bending all the weight of human strength into the struggle against them, but, in spite of all, coming out in the end defeated and crushed. It is the dark, tragic mysticism which Shakespeare felt in the thought of his day, and which Goethe took over from the legend as he found it. The "Urfaust" is a rare production, and far from being the least of Rheinhardt's brilliant successes.

AMERICAN LINER'S CALL TO QUEENSTOWN.

The first liner of the new United States Mail Steamship Co., the ss. Panhandle State, inaugurated the direct service between Ireland and America on her call at Queenstown on Friday last. The greatest interest has been taken in this company all over Ireland, and especially at Queenstown the calling of the Panhandle State was a welcome event. The ss. Panhandle State is 20,160 tons displacement, and as an oil-burner. The liner anchored in the inner harbour at Queenstown at 4.30 a.m. on Friday morning. She embarked a number of passengers from the tender America, under the superintendence of the representative of the Limerick Steamship Co., Ltd., Limerick, who are the general Irish passenger agents, and left the harbour for New York direct at 7 a.m. The passengers expressed themselves delighted with the accommodation provided. No expense has been spared to make the new line a success, and it is intended that this vessel and the other steamers, Old North State, Creol State, Centennial State, etc., of this line will call regularly at Queenstown.

The Portuguese Cabinet has resigned.

Cardinal Ferrari, Archbishop of Milan, is suffering from an attack of congestion of the lungs, and his condition is regarded as serious.

THE GREEK ELECTIONS.

The Times, in a leading article to-day upon the subject of the elections in Greece, remarks:—The Greeks have repulsed Venizelos and ordered democracy under a constitutional monarchy; they have declared—and declared by an immense majority—in favour of government by "Divine right," of "militarism," and of Constantine. That, at least, is the interpretation universally given at present to their vote. They may not have contemplated the results of this amazing choice, but they will have to undergo them. England and France, at all events, will have nothing to do with a restored Constantine. They may, or may not, have a right of veto upon his return under subsisting Treaties, and it may, or may not, be expedient to exercise any such right, should it exist. But a French communiqué, which seems to be inspired, affirms that both are definitely opposed to his recall, and that both are resolved to do everything to prevent it. They will certainly refuse the slightest aid, countenance, or support, political, financial, or economic, to a German agent on the Throne of Athens, or to a people who are capable of voluntarily submitting themselves to his rule. No adequate explanation of the voting has yet reached us, adds The Times, but, whatever may have been the motives which inspired it, the electors will soon find to their cost that it has had far-reaching effects of a very unfavourable kind upon the whole place of Greece in the new Europe. Pursued to what are generally understood to be its consequences, it will entirely change the outlook in the Near East. The Treaty with Turkey is still unratified, and this quite unexpected action of Greece must almost inevitably lead to modifications in the views of that instrument entertained by the Allies. We hope very earnestly that the Greek people will open their eyes, before it is too late, to the real character of the folly into which they have been seduced, concludes The Times. But no awakening upon their part, we must fear, can at once obliterate the painful impression it has made. The confidence of the Allies has received a rude shock. They were quite unprepared for such an exhibition of unsteadfastness, unwisdom, and ingratitude. If the Greeks ratify the course they have chosen at the polls, they must take the consequence on their own shoulders. The Allies will have nothing to do with Constantine or with Constantine's unrepentant supporters.

A PEACE CABINET FOR THE EMPIRE.

The Special Correspondent, who represented The Times during the tour of the Prince of Wales in Australia, writes in that journal to-day:—The Dominion Prime Ministers are coming here again in June. They have been in their own countries since they signed the Peace Treaty in Paris, and their return next year will be a renewal of the system of Empire Government which was tried during the war, when the Imperial War Cabinet was established. Is there to be an Imperial Peace Cabinet? The Prime Ministers are coming here, Mr. Lloyd George told us the other day, to attend to urgent matters of Imperial importance, and to carry on the kind of work which the Imperial War Cabinet did during the war. An Imperial Peace Cabinet seems to be suggested by the terms of this announcement. It is possible, even probable, that in this coming meeting of the Dominion Prime Ministers with British Ministers there is the beginning of a new peace system of Empire Government, which will be the direct descendant of the Imperial War Cabinet. If so, then there is no doubt that the British Empire has made another of those stealthy and almost unrecognised marches into the dim country of political expedients and experiments, which have been so characteristic of its past growth. An Imperial Peace Cabinet meeting only when the need for its decisions may arise—though this should not be taken as ruling out the probability of its having to meet pretty often, probably not less often than once in eighteen months—would mark an immense development in the theory and practice of Empire Government.

TRADE WITH RED RUSSIA.

We understand, says The Times to-day, that the re-drafted trade agreement with Russia will be considered in full Cabinet to-day. M. Krassin has been officially informed that every British prisoner in Russia must be accounted for, and in safety, before any agreement can be approved by the British Government. It is understood that the revised draft differs in certain respects from the earlier draft, the text of which was published in The Times last month. But, despite this revision, it is understood that the Cabinet is divided on the question of entering into trade relations with Soviet Russia unless such an agreement gives unqualified recognition to Russian debts. The Prime Minister and Mr. Bonar Law are believed to be in favour of a resumption of trade with Russia without any such condition, but the Foreign Office, the War Office, and the Treasury are said to be strongly opposed to the signing of the treaty. In this opposition they are strongly supported by all the chief business organisations of the country. The leading banks, the Stock Exchange Committee, the Federation of British Industries, the Association of British Chambers of Commerce, the insurance companies, and the accepting houses have all strongly protested against the conclusion of any treaty with Russia on the lines laid down by Mr. Bonar Law in July last, and adopted in the first draft. This draft provided that Russia should recognise certain debts as constituting claims for compensation, but completely ignored the vast volume of State, municipal, and other money debts.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

Quiet conditions again prevailed in the Stock markets yesterday, says The Times, and the general tone was dull. It was feared that the Paris Bourse would be upset by the news of the defeat of M. Venizelos, and, as a matter of fact, there was a certain amount of French selling during the early hours, which chiefly affected South African Shares and Foreign Bonds. Provincial selling depressed Industrial Shares, and Argentine Railway Stocks were flat on the reports of floods. Among the few bright features was a recovery in the War Loan and in Canadian Pacific Railway and Royal Dutch Shares.

FREEDOM OF THE CITY OF DANZIG.

The freedom of the city of Danzig was formally proclaimed on Monday afternoon (says a Berlin telegram) in the Constituent Assembly of Danzig by Lieutenant-Colonel Strutt, the Deputy High Commissioner, who announced that the League of Nations would shortly take over the protection of the free city of Danzig, as well as the guaranteeing of the protection of the Constitution adopted by the Constituent Assembly. He concluded:—"Now, gentlemen, speaking as a soldier to soldiers, for nearly all of you have been soldiers, and soldiers of the greatest and most wonderful Army the world has ever seen—(loud cheers on the Right)—I say to you let us keep the peace at all times both in and outside this House. The world needs peace. May Danzig and Poland be an example in this. May the two peoples live happy and contented, flourish and prosper by mutual trust and friendship with mutual assistance. I hereby solemnly declare the City of Danzig and the surrounding territory from to-day a free city."

POSITION IN EGYPT.

In the House of Commons yesterday, Lieutenant-Commander Kenworthy asked the Prime Minister whether he could give the House some information about the position of the negotiations as to the Protectorate or self-government in Egypt, and whether he would give the House an opportunity of debating the subject before that country broke out into open rebellion.

Mr. Bonar Law, who replied, said—There was, I am sorry to say, something very nearly approaching open insurrection in Egypt many months ago, but there is nothing approaching that at present.

Colonel Sir Frederick Hall asked whether, before any definite steps were taken with regard to Egypt, the House would have an opportunity of discussing the subject.

Mr. Bonar Law said that he had already given a pledge that no serious step would be taken with regard to Egypt without the knowledge of the House, and he presumed the House would take sufficient interest in the matter to discuss it.

GOETHE'S "FAUST" IN BERLIN.

THE ORIGINAL DRAMA.

A RHEINHARDT PRODUCTION.

BERLIN, NOVEMBER 10.

With characteristic genius in the work of putting before his public the choicest literary productions of dramatic art, Max Rheinhardt has at last brought out Goethe's "Urfaust," as it is known in German. The work known as "Faust" in the form of the opera—the form, perhaps, best known both in Great Britain and in Germany—is the theme of Goethe's immortal poem. Goethe, like Shakespeare, did not evolve the themes of his poems from his own imagination, nor, like his immortal English counterpart, did he take the bare story over in the original traditional form. In their master-productions both poets caught, in the age-long legends of their day, the spirit of a great idea, a universal truth, and, while preserving the spirit and, to some extent, the classical mould of the story, transfigured them and infused them with the spirit of genius. Both, moreover, in their master-pieces furnished the world with no finished work, the product of a short reflective period in the manner to-day so relatively frequent.

The "Faust" of Goethe, like the "Hamlet" of Shakespeare, was the growth of many years moulded and modified by the deepening experience and reflection of a poet's life-time. The interest of scholars naturally attaching to such a work has led to many a research into the manner of its development. Until 1887 it was believed that the earlier manuscripts of Goethe's "Faust" had been destroyed by the author, until, in the papers left behind on the death of one of the court ladies to the Duchess Anna Amalia of Sachsen-Weimar, a manuscript copy of the original was found. The work was awaited with great expectation, and was published shortly afterwards under the title "Goethe's Faust in the Original Form." Since then it has been referred to as the "Urfaust." This is the form of the poem which Rheinhardt has staged for us.

Of all the ways in which I have seen "Faust" played—and I have seen many—I have never found one which has impressed me more. The form of the story of "Faust" with which the public has grown familiar is the version of the opera. It does not differ materially from the usual version of the drama. But just as Shakespeare had to choose from a number of popular current forms of the legends embodied in his plays, handed down through history largely by word of mouth, so Goethe had to make a choice of material. The "Urfaust," being the original form of the story as it came from Goethe's hand, differs considerably from the familiar and later version, and, seen for the first time, leaves one wondering at times what has gone wrong with the story. Here and there one finds too much in the play. Here and there the actors seem to take unpardonable liberty with the text. But ever and anon it strikes back to the familiar path, and one catches up again the original idea. There is a grim ruggedness about the whole production, a sense of titanic awesomeness in the metre and rhythm of the poetry. At one time the whole theatre is paralysed into horror by the use of a word more drastic to a modern ear than the explosive prank of Mr. Bernard Shaw in "Pygmalion" or of Shakespeare in his most lurid moments.

Familiarity with the thread of the story has enabled Rheinhardt to use to great effect the mode of stage expression used in "Frühlings Erwachen." The "Urfaust" is produced in the Deutsches Theatre. This theatre has a rotating stage, and the whole of the stage floor can be raised bodily by a mechanism like that of an ordinary passenger lift. Thus the scenes can be prepared beforehand, and, one after another, can be put before the public in rapid succession. In this production the stage is dressed in the form of a church window, or long, narrow picture-frame running to a point at the top. It gives a mediæval air to the work. Then, in rapid succession, one scene follows upon another, so that one gets but suggestive extracts from Goethe's work, and is left to fill in the gaps for oneself.

Hardly on any stage have I found an effect so deeply impressive and so awe-inspiring. One is all the time in the atmosphere of the occult, and feels the ice-cold breath of the spirit world. The long, midnight soliloquy of the study-worn scholar, the calling up of the Prince of Spirits, who appears as a phosphorescent face against an intense darkness, the mental anguish of the student once committed to his course of action, the conversation of Mephistopheles with the young aspirant to knowledge, the scene in the wine-cellar, the first meeting with Margaret, the scenes in the village street, the stroll in the garden, the women at the well, the soul agony of the penitent sinner in the church, the return of the soldier, and the final scene in the prison—which in this version is the final scene—all fill one with a succession of emotions which Rheinhardt has exploited to the full.

One cannot omit to say a word about the technique of the sounds on the stage in this production. The weirdness of the creaking in the study, the rising, howling, moaning of the wind at midnight on the appearance of Mephistopheles, the thunder and rain in the storm scene, the tolling of the church bell at Mass, the pealing of a distant organ, the clanking of chains—these contribute to that arresting spell which Rheinhardt's interpretation of the "Urfaust" casts over one. It is played right through with only one short break, so that the continuity of the effect is not lost.

Mephistopheles—a character as it were without any centre of attraction, a personality without a soul, an entity outside of the range of the human and calculable, but a symbol of dynamic forces at work upon human destiny—receives a new fascination from the interpretation of Rheinhardt. Right through the whole piece there is the same characteristic feature which distinguishes the tragedies of Shakespeare—mankind in the grip of, and in conflict with, supernormal forces, recognising their perilous nature and bending all the weight of human strength into the struggle against them, but, in spite of all, coming out in the end defeated and crushed. It is the dark, tragic mysticism which Shakespeare felt in the thought of his day, and which Goethe took over from the legend as he found it. The "Urfaust" is a rare production, and far from being the least of Rheinhardt's brilliant successes.

revolver to fire he was shot through the right hip by the centre man of the three. Witness's brother ran on to the street. Constable Oakley fell against witness, and he took him into Franklin's shop. When witness came out again he saw a man running across up Newenham street. He could not say if this man took part in the "hold up" or not. He ran after the man, but lost him round the corner. He then saw five men coming from the direction of Newenham street, towards Windmill street. They were carrying revolvers or pistols. He did not see where they went to, and could not identify them.

Cross-examined by Mr. Kinahan, witness said that his brother broke away from the "hold up." He did not see a running fight between these men and his brother in Newenham street. He did not go to the assistance of his brother, as he did not see him after leaving Constable Oakley in the shop. He looked for him, and found him afterwards in a private house and after he had reported the occurrence at the barrack. He heard shots before he brought Oakley into Franklin's and when in there.

In the course of further cross-examination, witness said that he had attended a parade in William street barrack yard on a different date to his brother, when he identified a man named Kelly.

Answering the Prosecuting Counsel, witness said that it was about a quarter of an hour after he reported the affair at the barrack that he found his brother.

Replying to the President, witness said that the man who shot Oakley was as tall as himself, and he (witness) only weighed 11 stone. Oakley was first shot in the right hand, and then from behind above the hip. He could not walk and had to be partly carried.

The Court at this stage adjourned until ten o'clock to-day.

THE GREEK ELECTIONS

VENIZELOS DEFEATED.

RUMOURS OF RETURN OF EX-KING CONSTANTINE.

SERIOUS SITUATION AT ATHENS.

The Greek elections, which have resulted in the defeat of the Venizelist Party, have caused universal surprise.

Speculation is rife as to the possible return of ex-King Constantine. Upon this point a Paris newspaper says that it has authority for stating that the policy of the Allies is to offer an absolute veto to the return of the ex-King.

The Constantinists are trying to form a Government. There is much unrest in Athens, and it is feared that the Army may get out of hand. It is said that M. Venizelos intends to go abroad.

The latest election results, says a Reuter's Athens telegram of Monday, give 118 seats to the Venizelists and 250 to the Constantinists. M. Venizelos and all the Ministers except two have been defeated. Not a single Venizelist has been returned for Macedonia and Old Greece, except in Epirus and the Islands.

The Venizelist newspapers claim that the Government will have a small majority in the new House.

A message from Athens, received in Paris, says that the Government has resigned. The Regent sent for M. Rhallis to form a Cabinet. The Bourse is closed for fear of panic.

A telegram from Athens, of Monday, 11.30 p.m., says:—M. Rhallis has been persuaded to form a Cabinet. The former Opposition leaders will meet to-morrow to discuss whether or not they shall recognise Admiral Coundouriotis as Regent.

A Reuter's Paris telegram yesterday says:—From the international point of view, says the Matin, referring to the Greek situation, the question is clear. We are in a position to announce that the Allies offer an absolute veto to the return of ex-King Constantine.

An Athens telegram of yesterday's date says:—The results of the elections are causing general stupefaction. The complete victory of the anti-Venizelists seems certain. It is believed that M. Venizelos will go abroad, and his successor will be either M. Gounaris or M. Rhallis. It would appear from the declarations of M. Gounaris that Greece's foreign policy will undergo no changes under the new régime.

A Reuter's Athens telegram of Monday says:—Opposition bravos, with a view to spreading terror among the crowd, fired seven shots, killing a youth. They endeavoured to escape, but were observed and arrested.

An Exchange Athens telegram says that M. Venizelos has advised the Liberal Party to abide by the popular verdict.

An Associated Press telegram, dated Athens, Monday, 8 p.m., says:—At a number of points in the city to-day troops made use of their fire-arms in order to dispel trouble-makers, and shops, banks, and theatres are closed. Soldiers are patrolling the streets. The inhabitants are not venturing out of doors to-night. Fear is entertained that further disturbances may lead to the proclamation of martial law, and there is said to be danger of the army getting out of hand. The disorders began when a procession of Opposition adherents engaged in a street parade made an attack on the Liberal Club, whence the troops fired on the crowd. The military later attacked the Opposition headquarters, which had been barricaded, and from which a few shots had been fired, and bombarded it for two hours. A number of bystanders were wounded. The troops are guarding public buildings and the homes of leaders of both sides.

An Athens telegram, dated Monday, says—Rioting to-day was caused by reactionary elements. Shots were fired at Venizelist demonstrators from the houses facing the Foreign Office, and two persons were killed. Armed police hastened to the spot, and there was a lively fusillade. Further trouble is feared.

Referring to the Greek crisis, the Matin (Paris) suggests that it is probable that, to prevent civil strife between the two parties of fairly equal strength, the accession of the ex-King's eldest son might be considered as a measure likely to calm public opinion.

A Reuter's Athens telegram of Monday, 8.45 p.m., says:—The result of the elections is declared in Venizelist circles to be largely due to the tactics of the Premier's adversaries, who took advantage of the people's weariness of protracted warfare to lay on the shoulders of the country's greatest statesman responsibilities not incumbent on him. Not content with winning the elections by such means, they are now endeavouring to terrorise Venizelists by a repetition of the events of 1916. To-day there was indiscriminate firing from windows and in the streets at five different parts of the city, and reactionary organs are seeking to throw the responsibility on the Venizelists. From the morning onward a feeling of uneasiness prevailed, and shops and banks were closed, while the streets became almost deserted.

Ex-King Constantine's return is now freely spoken of, and his partisans declare that they will take the lead in the Army operating against Kemal Pasha. All this talk about the return of the former King is, however, possibly only idle chatter, for his partisans are well aware that such a proceeding would be liable to lead to complications with the Allies.

D'ANNUNZIO WON OVER.

DRAMATIC INTERVIEW.

A Reuter's Trieste telegram of Tuesday says that reports from Zara describe the interview between d'Annunzio and Admiral Millo at sea. The interview, which lasted two hours, is said to have been very dramatic. Admiral Millo declared that he would keep his word as a loyal soldier to the King and Italy. It is stated that Admiral Millo's task of winning over d'Annunzio succeeded completely, and the Navy is in a high state of discipline. Admiral Millo has sent the King a most loyal and respectful telegram.

MESOPOTAMIA.

THE GOVERNMENT'S POLICY.

PROPOSED ARAB STATE.

Mr. Churchill, replying to Lieutenant-Commander Kenworthy in the House of Commons yesterday, said that during the recent rebellion in Mesopotamia 8,200 casualties of Arab insurgents had been reported. The proportion of killed was estimated at about one-third. The policy of the Government was to set up an Arab State, under an Arab Government, not of rebels, but out of the responsible element in the Arab community, who, the Government believed, could control and guide their fellow-countrymen.

GENERAL WRANGEL.

THE EVACUATION OF SEBASTOPOL.

A Constantinople telegram, dated Monday, states:—Sebastopol was evacuated last night in good order. General Wrangel left on a Russian cruiser filled with soldiers. Three transports packed with 20,000 troops, and a fourth with wounded left for an unknown port. Ten thousand more troops are reported to be evacuating Theodosia. The Reds were last night reported to be 15 miles from Theodosia. The Reds had not reached Sebastopol when the city was evacuated.

Another Constantinople despatch says:—General Wrangel was the last man to leave the town, which was left in the hands of local Soviets, who openly proclaimed themselves once the situation was clear. The embarkation was conducted in perfect order. General Wrangel showed a splendid spirit, walking about the town without an escort.

An Exchange Constantinople telegram states that General Wrangel has arrived there.

STATEMENT BY MR. CHURCHILL.

Questioned by Mr. Richardson, in the House of Commons yesterday, as to the position of General Wrangel,

Mr. Churchill said that on November 11th the Soviet troops broke through the last line of General Wrangel's defences in the north of the Crimea, and advanced rapidly. Djankoi was captured on November 12th, and Simferopol on the 13th of November.

Mr. Hogge asked if there was a British Military Mission with General Wrangel.

Mr. Churchill—I think there are two officers, but I have received no special report from them. Events are moving very rapidly.

Mr. Devlin—Will the right hon. gentleman requisition General Wrangel's services to keep company with General Tudor in burning down houses?

Mr. Churchill (warmly)—General Wrangel has not burned down houses, but the people he has been protecting will now be subjected to the vilest persecution.

An Annapolis (Maryland) telegram, dated Monday, says—Refusing to accept a compromise offered by the Board of Visitors and Governors of St. John's College here relative to "ragging," the second year men walked out in a body, followed by all other classes, numbering some 250 students. St. John's is the oldest college in America, and was founded in 1696.

BRITISH POLICY IN PERSIA.

LIMITS OF OCCUPATION.

AN IMPORTANT INTEREST.

THE ANGLO-PERSIAN AGREEMENT.

LORD CURZON'S STATEMENT.

In the House of Lords yesterday,

The Marquis of Crewe asked the Foreign Secretary if he could make any statement on the political and military situation in Persia, and on the responsibilities at present undertaken by His Majesty's Government in that country.

Lord Lamington and Lord Sydenham also made some observations on the same subject.

Earl Curzon agreed that a Government pronouncement on Persian policy was due. He said that many of Lord Crewe's questions were military conundrums, to which he was not qualified to reply. Questions had been put elsewhere, in a tone of suspicion—Why were British or Indian Forces near the Caspian; why should our Generals or men be at Kasvin; what was the real story about the Cossack Division; why had we forces in North Persia at all; what was the interest of the British taxpayer in this part of the world? These were legitimate questions. Some critics, in their anxiety to prove that the Government was guilty of sinister motives, condemned their policy as one of wild and reckless adventure and strained Imperialism. In some quarters the Government policy was regarded as one act of dementia. He was not disturbed by such references. He had for thirty years been closely connected with the politics of Persia, and he believed that Persian Ministers and statesmen had regarded him as a true and consistent friend of their country. Such he had always endeavoured to be, but the responsibility for policy was that of the Government as a whole. The situation in Persia was a direct and inevitable sequel of the war. The war had left its aftermath of obligations upon us, from which we were only slowly extricating ourselves in Persia, and in almost every other part of the world. The war did not end with the conclusion of the armistice. On the contrary, large parts of the world had since been actively engaged in war. The once-tranquil East had been shaken with prodigious convulsions. The two great Empires of Turkey and Russia had simultaneously disappeared, and just as we were piecing together the scattered and disordered fragments there appeared on the scene the disturbing and shattering force of aggressive Bolshevism.

THE QUESTION OF OCCUPATION.

Was it to be supposed that the Government would prolong the occupation by our troops for an hour longer than was necessary? Every instinct of expediency and economy pointed to the reduction, and, as soon as might be, the withdrawal of our forces at Mosul and elsewhere. But such withdrawals could not be abrupt. These countries were in commotion; we had no right to replace commotion by chaos. The highways of the East were strewn and littered with the débris of the war, and if there fell on us the task of being scavengers we should have time to carry out that duty. We were doing it more quickly than the critics supposed, and in the case of Persia there had been a curtailment of our commitments and a withdrawal of our forces on a scale which seemed to be unrealised. During the war Persia might at any moment have become a dangerous theatre of war. The whole of our activity was devoted to steadying the situation. Our policy, pursued with unvarying patience and great ability by our representatives, was successful, and the danger was overcome. Persia realised what we had done for her, and her attitude of suspicion changed from doubtful amity or open hostility to sincere friendliness. It could not be disputed that Persia was an important British interest. That had been the policy of every British Cabinet for over 100 years. A peaceful, stable, friendly, and independent Persia was the corner-stone of our policy. It was the basis of the Anglo-Persian Agreement, which categorically and expressly re-affirmed and guaranteed the independence of Persia. There was never anything in the nature of an attempt to suggest a British Protectorate. We never thought of going to the League of Nations and asking for a mandate for Persia. Aga Khan regarded the Agreement as a model of what such an Agreement should be. They were not under any obligation to send the Agreement to the League of Nations, but he was willing, nevertheless, to act on Article 18 of the Covenant. It would go to the League with redoubled weight if the Persians ratified it. The new Persian Government preferred to treat it as in suspense until the Persian Parliament approved it. That was a pedantic and foolish policy. They denied themselves the full value of an agreement by which they had already begun to profit. We had acquiesced in that policy, providing only that the Parliament was summoned and really had the Agreement before it. If Persia decided to stand alone without the assistance provided by the Agreement, we had no objection, but if she ratified the Agreement we would proceed with it. Our forces had been withdrawn by stages from South Persia and Mashad. A difficult situation had arisen in the North-West owing to the threat of Bolshevik Russia to set up a Soviet Republic. Our small force of 3,600 men was the only barrier to this threat. The majority of the members of the Persian Parliament had been elected, and the Agreement would be submitted to them early next year. It was the sole possible guarantee for the continued stability of Persia, and he scarcely could imagine any Persians acquiescing in any other solution. If Persia declined to ratify, she must take her own course, and the responsibility must be theirs. We had told the Persian Government that they could not rely on our military forces indefinitely, and that we might not be able to prolong our military position beyond the spring. The new Persian Government included a party of young Democrats who had our sympathy and support. There had been no reckless adventure on the part of the British Government, but a deliberate and carefully thought-out plan in a kaleidoscopic situation. He did not grudge the responsibility or the heavy expenditure if out of the chaos they enabled Persia to maintain her integrity. But it must be a two-sided obligation, and it was for Persia to decide her own destiny.

The House adjourned at 6.7 p.m.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

GENEVA CONFERENCE AND PUBLICITY.

A Reuter's Geneva telegram of Tuesday says:—At the third sitting of the assembly of the League of Nations to-day, Lord Robert Cecil (South Africa) desired to raise the question of publicity of committees' debates.

M. Viviani thought it was a mistake to discuss the question at such an early stage, at the same time describing it as contrary to all Parliamentary usage.

Lord Robert Cecil said there was a danger of the assembly losing contact with public opinion if discussions were always held with closed doors, and he asked the assembly to make this concession to public opinion, and in this way manifesting its desire to suppress secret diplomacy.

Lord Robert Cecil finally proposed that the principle of public sessions should be accepted, but that each committee should be empowered to sit at any time with closed doors.

Signor Tittoni opposed the admission of the public to the sittings of committees, but was willing that committees should keep detailed records of their proceedings.

After a prolonged discussion between M. Viviani, Lord Robert Cecil, Sir James Allen (New Zealand), and Mr. Fisher, the assembly adopted a motion by M. Viviani, with an amendment by Mr. Fisher, providing that the committees shall keep a record of their debates and issue a summary as quickly as possible, which would always be available to all members of the assembly for reference.

PERUVIAN DELEGATE DISMISSED

A Reuter's telegram from Lima, dated Tuesday, says:—The Peruvian Foreign Office has sent a telegram to Geneva dismissing Dr. Mariano Cornejo, head of the Peruvian Delegation to the assembly of the League of Nations. This irregular method of dismissal, which is being widely discussed, is attributed to certain declarations made by Dr. Cornejo in an interview published in the Paris Eclair regarding the form the League should take, and the political aims of the United States in that connection, which have been characterised in some quarters as imprudent.

A Reuter's Washington telegram of yesterday says:—An official report received here from Lima with reference to the dismissal of Dr. Cornejo, head of the Peruvian Delegation to the assembly of the League of Nations, attributes this action to certain statements made by the Minister, in which he criticised the attitude of Senator Harding towards the League of Nations, and the position taken up by him on the League issue during the recent Presidential campaign.

Last night the Maidstone Coroner further inquired into the mysterious circumstances surrounding the death of Mrs. Margaret Hastings, 67, widow of Mr. C. L. W. Hastings, grandson of the eleventh Lord Huntingdon. The deceased lady died on October 9th, after partaking of a cup of coffee. Dr. Webster, Home Office expert, stated, as a result of the analysis, that the stomach contained over 12 grains of arsenic, four of which would be a fatal dose. The coffee was free from arsenic. The jury returned a verdict of suicide during temporary insanity.

TRADES CONGRESS AND IRISH RAILWAY CRISIS.

RAILWAYMEN ASKED TO DECIDE.

PROMISE OF SUPPORT IF FIGHT CONTINUES.

A PLAN OF IRISH SETTLEMENT.

ENGLISH LABOUR POLICY APPROVED.

A special All-Ireland Trade Union Congress was held at the Mansion House, Dublin, yesterday, in connection with the munitions crisis on the Irish railways. The doors were opened at 10.30 a.m., but it was considerably after that hour before the proceedings opened. The chair was taken by Mr. Thomas Foran, President of the Irish Transport and General Workers' Union. The following members of the National Executive of the Irish Trade Union Congress were on the platform:—Alderman William O'Brien (treasurer), Thomas Johnson (secretary), Miss R. Timmon, M. T. Cummins, Cathal O'Shannon, L. J. Duffy, D. Cullen, George Nason (Cork), L. J. Larkin (Waterford), T. Daly, Thomas Farren, J. T. O'Farrell.

The Right Hon. the Lord Mayor, together with the Chairman (Mr. Thomas Foran), came on the platform shortly after 11 o'clock, and were received with applause by the assembled delegates.

The Chairman, in introducing the Lord Mayor to the meeting, said he need not refer to the numerous occasions on which his lordship had taken a man's part in labour fights.

This statement was warmly applauded.

The Lord Mayor then welcomed the delegates to the Mansion House, and expressed the hope that their deliberations would be useful to themselves and, above all, would be of benefit to their country. "Never, in my opinion," proceeded his lordship, "in the history of organised labour were the eyes of the people of this country more firmly fixed upon any meeting than they are on your action to-day. Heretofore your meetings were mainly concerned with dealing with labour problems, but to-day it is cast on you to face a grave national problem and a grave national crisis, and I hope that, no matter what action you take to-day, it will be for the benefit of our country." He came there out of compliment to the delegates and their President, and it was not for him to dare to dictate to or lecture them on what they should, or should not, do. As one who had the interests of labour and of his country at heart he trusted that their action would be for the common good of their poor old persecuted country. It was a great pleasure to welcome the delegates under the presidency of Mr. Foran, who had been a tower of strength to him (Lord Mayor) in the position he held during the past four years.

CHAIRMAN'S SPEECH.

The Chairman, who was received with applause, said that he wanted every delegate present to realise, as the National Executive realised, that this was one of the most momentous conferences that had ever taken place in the Labour movement in this country. To-day they were going to discuss a matter of life and death, not only for the Labour movement, but for the whole working classes and others of this country. They had already seen the evidences of agencies at work to mislead the people, and to misconstrue the whole position as regards the action of their Executive and of the railwaymen in this country. And for that reason it was necessary at the very outset that they, as a National Executive, should put the whole situation plainly and fairly before them. As most of them were already aware, this fight against the carrying of munitions was started by the railwaymen of their own free will. They as railwaymen, members of what might be regarded as one of the greatest unions in these countries, believing that after their fellows in England, Scotland, and Wales had decided not to carry munitions of war to Poland—and that decision was backed up by the Executive of the Railwaymen's Union—they had every reason to believe that when they as Irishmen took similar action in regard to their own country they could at least rely on the support of their own union. In that they were mistaken; nevertheless, they decided to carry on and to decline under any circumstances to handle munitions for the carrying on of war on their own people. That fight had gone on for a certain period, and the railwaymen, through their own union, appealed to the National Executive of the Labour Party, as the only competent body, to advise them in such circumstances. And the Labour Party, believing that the fight was a just and honourable fight, and a fight in which all the resources of the Labour movement should be placed in support of the railwaymen, and that they should advise the railwaymen as to how they should conduct the fight after discussing the matter and forming a joint committee.

UNEQUALLED SUPPORT.

They organised support for the railwaymen, and their success in that direction had never been equalled in the history of any dispute in the Labour movement. (Applause.) So much so that up to now he said there definitely that the railwaymen in Ireland had suffered very little, if anything at all—certainly nothing at all as compared with great numbers of other workers who had been thrown out of employment consequent on the reduction of the train services in this country. (Hear, hear.) These men had been thrown out of employment, and had got no support from the Labour Party or anyone else, and yet they were accused, as a Labour Party, of coercing the railwaymen into doing a thing that they did not want to do. Other representatives of the Executive would, he hoped, deal with that aspect of the situation, so he would pass on. As a result of the conference which was held with the railwaymen in Dublin last week, the National Executive decided that, as the whole Labour movement of this country was likely to be affected by any decision that might be come to by the railwaymen—they believed that that Congress, as the representatives of all sections of Labour, should be called together to discuss the whole situation, and there was no use in disguising the fact that the closing down of the railways in general would naturally cause great suffering and privation among all classes in this country. Realising that fact, they sincerely hoped that everyone would remember that nothing had been ever gained in this country without self-sacrifice. (Applause.) The National Executive were practically unanimous that this had been a good fight up to now, and if it had been a good fight up to now—notwithstanding the threat of Sir Hamar Greenwood—it was a good thing to go on and to fight it out. (Applause.) While that was their opinion they also wanted the delegates to discuss calmly and deliberately the situation in all its bearings, not as individuals, but as representatives of their own class, believing in the justice of the fight, and that at no time of Ireland's history had the working classes let down the national movement in the country. (Applause.)

MR. THOMAS JOHNSON.

Mr. Thomas Johnson, Secretary of the National Executive, said that he did not think any member of the Conference, or any leader-writer of a newspaper, or any of the numerous correspondents who had been sending anonymous letters to the newspapers had any realisation greater than those on the platform of the importance of the issue at stake which they were considering at that Conference, and the gravity and seriousness of the position entailed. The refusal to handle munitions of war in Ireland had not come on the National Executive now. It was present in their minds on the 21st May last—they knew quite well that when the Irish dock workers and the Irish railwaymen and any body of workmen refused to do the bidding of their employers, who in turn were doing the bidding of the British military authority, they were challenging that British military authority; and if that authority were prepared to "go through with it," then the people of this country would have to go through with it also.

Having sketched the origin and history of the dispute, Mr. Johnston continued:—In the meantime the only action taken by the executive of the Labour Party was to organise funds to sustain the North Wall men in the fight, having been refused support from their own union. He was not blaming the union for that. He was only stating a fact. So little did the National Executive of the Labour Party intervene in the matter up to that time that Mr. Cramp, who was equal to Mr. J. H. Thomas, M.P., in the N.U.R., did not think it necessary to even pay a visit to the National Executive to discuss the question (cries of "shame")—not necessarily "shame," for he realised and recognised the matter was a railwayman's matter. The railwaymen had taken the matter upon themselves, and up to then the National Executive had no responsibility for the action of the workers in their initiative. The North Wall men came to the executive and asked for their advice and support, which they willingly and enthusiastically gave. (Hear hear.) They had an appeal from the Cork railwaymen that the executive should come in and advise and direct railwaymen in the matter of this dispute. Then it was the executive came in and gave all the assistance and all the guidance, using all the restraint they considered necessary, to help the men to conduct the fight with the prospect of ultimate success.

THE COMMON GOOD.

He did not think it was necessary to say anything further in refutation of the ill-informed, spiteful, and cowardly resolutions passed by several branches of the N.U.R. (Cheers and hear hear.) They realised the full gravity of the situation that faced them, as it was not the decision of the Labour Party or any other bureaucratic body that led the workers of Ireland to enter on this struggle. It was not going to be the decision of any bureaucratic body in Dublin that would compel the workers to carry on the fight, but they had arrived at this stage. He said without any hesitation that if they determined to stick to their resolve as railwaymen, and other workers' representatives were determined to stick to the resolve, that the country would again respond magnificently and enter with them into the struggle. (Cheers.) But this was not a fight that was going to be sustained by funds. It would mean throwing back the social life of Ireland temporarily, perhaps for 100 years. It meant that they would be running the economy of the country without railways, and that the people would have to live, perhaps, under certain privations of luxuries, certain privations of what were come to be thought necessaries, but really were not necessaries at all. It would mean that the wealthy and moderately wealthy and the little better off would have to throw in their resources for the common good. It would mean that the localities would have to be self-supporting. It would mean a complete change in the social outlook while the struggle lasted. It might mean physical suffering, and it was for them to decide whether in their opinion it was worth while to enter into a path of actual physical suffering for the sake of a principle and a moral idea.

MEANING OF THE FIGHT.

He explained that the struggle meant that men should decide that they would not enter into a compact with employer or Government authority to take an active part in doing an evil or bloody thing—that they would not actively and consciously help in the conveyance of arms for the destruction of the Irish nation. They might decide that the sacrifice was too great, and that they should bow to superior force without making a sacrifice. It was for the delegates to decide. The executive had given their opinion. There was another issue which affected trade unionists to a degree not yet realised. It was as if a printer were compelled on pain of sacrifice of himself and family to set blasphemous or obscene type, or a shopkeeper were compelled to put poison in the food he was selling at the dictates of a tyranny, whether by an employer or a Government authority. It was a challenge to the morality and conscience of the people. In refusing to participate in work of a damnable kind they were making the assertion that they had a claim to be co-operators in the end sought after by their work. They were human beings, and had a right to know the end and purpose sought after by their work. They had to decide whether the freedom of action of the people was worth the sacrifice that would be entailed. They knew what was happening in the country, and that there might have been doubts six months ago as to the purpose for which arms were being imported. There was no doubt to-day as to the purpose of the importation of arms. There was an attempt to drive the people to revolt of a physical kind, and strike at the solidarity of the nation, and a sign of wavering would be hailed with delight by the Churchills and the Geddeses. If it was seen that the people resolved to go through with it at any cost the forces of righteousness throughout the world would be rallied to their support. They believed that righteousness would prevail, and if they had no faith in that, then let them bow to the God of War.

The Chairman then intimated that the views of the Executive had been heard, and they now wanted the views of the delegates.

Mr. O'Flanagan, T.C. (Dublin) submitted a resolution to the effect that the question of the continuity of the munitions strike should be decided by ballot of the trade and labour unions affiliated to the Irish Labour Party and Trade Union Congress, and that the form of voting and distribution of ballot papers be left in the hands of the National Executive. With regard to his trade it was hardly the duty of the Congress to say what they were to do, although a recommendation might be made to them as individual members.

A suggestion of the Chairman that the resolution mentioned by Mr. O'Flanagan might be brought forward at a later stage was agreed to.

A RAILWAYMAN'S VIEW.

Mr. T. C. Daly (N.U.R., Broadstone) said that it was not a time for the employment of language calculated to arouse ecstatic plaudits, but for cold, calm, dispassionate reasoning. He referred to a conference held a week ago in the Court of Conscience, Dublin, and said that the correct procedure was not then adopted. Some of the delegates, he suggested, before entering the Court of Conscience, left their consciences outside. One delegate, in the heat of enthusiasm, said—"We are going to fight on." That very individual, two days previously, came to him (Mr. Daly), with tears in his eyes, to try to effect a settlement. Another delegate said—"There is plenty of food in the country—commandeer it."

A Delegate—Hear, hear.

Mr. Daly—Yes, "hear, hear." Does that individual seriously suggest that that can be done to-day?

At this there were cries of "Yes" and "No."

Mr. Daly went on to say that he would not make a speech in Dublin that would not be unpalatable in Belfast. The railwaymen of Ireland had proved their loyalty to Ireland, and they would never be wanting in that respect. But let them not be carried away by Socialistic theories which were not practicable. It had been said, "Commandeer the food supply." Could the people of Tralee commandeer the food supply?

"They have not the moral courage," replied a voice.

"I venture to say," retorted Mr. Daly, "that they are braver men than you are."

There were some cries of "Withdraw" and other interruptions.

Mr. Daly continued—I know Tralee and Cork, and if it were possible to commandeer food in Ireland, Tralee would be the first place where it would be done. One of the delegates at the recent conference in the Court of Conscience said—"I have a mandate from my branch to fight on." But a delegate from the same branch at another conference repudiated that statement. No matter what decision the Congress came to now they could not keep the Midland railwaymen in their employment. There were thirteen guards in the service, and at the rate of dismissal of three a day how long would it last? The men were not afraid of the issue, but they did not come to hear false talk about "fighting on," when they knew in their heart and soul that they could not do it under present circumstances. If this went on, then in a short while there would be 15,000 or 16,000 railwaymen on the streets. He was not optimistic enough to go the whole way with the executive and say that the people of Ireland could support that crowd. It was an absolute impossibility to do so. "If," he declared, "this meeting conveys to the railwaymen of Ireland a recommendation to fight on, I will fall in with that view, and there will be no more loyal supporter, but I am giving the warning that I fear such a fight would end in disaster." If the fight continued, and they plunged Ireland into an abyss of misery and starvation, where could they expect support from an impoverished country? They might shout "Ourselves Alone." But could they do it?

Mr. Harte (Dockers' Union) pointed to the fact that other workers besides railwaymen were in a state of semi-starvation, and their cases should be considered. The idea of the British Government was that the closing down of the railways would bring about starvation, and they would break the spirit of the Irish people. They had to consider whether the closing down of the railways would help the British Government. When the railways were closed the Government would have power to separate certain districts of Ireland. They should consider whether by closing the railways they might play the game of the Government, or might be in a stronger position to carry on the fight. People should have the moral courage to state their inmost thoughts. It was necessary to look at the matter from the point of view of the people who were suffering and those who were likely to suffer. The National Executive should only be an advisory body. It was for the rank and file to say whether or not they would take a certain course. It was not in the power of the delegates present to take action in the name of men who had never been consulted.

THE CALL ON THE PUBLIC PURSE.

Mr. Bermingham, Irish Secretary, N.U.R., said if he were asked in which way the speech of Mr. Johnson in the early part of the proceedings lay he should say it lay in the direction of a settlement of the whole affair, and if a vote were to be taken it should have been taken the moment Mr. Johnson sat down. The railwaymen had acted in an honest belief not to handle instruments of destruction to destroy the lives of their own people. If they continued the struggle 15,000 railwaymen—all the railwaymen of Ireland, except the north-east corner of Ulster—would be within a week or two thrown

POSITION OF GREAT SOUTHERN COMPANY.

NOTICES TO STAFFS MAY BE ISSUED AT ONCE.

The state of affairs on the Great Southern and Western Railway has now reached a point where the management find it virtually impossible to "carry on." The depletion of staffs by the suspension of men who refuse to work trains carrying munitions or armed forces of the Crown has gone on at an increased rate during the past week or so, and at the present moment the company has almost reached the end of its supply of men capable of acting as guards.

It is understood that almost immediately the company will issue notices to all members of its wages and salaried staffs terminating their employment.

Yesterday was the worst day yet experienced by the company, as no fewer than fifteen or sixteen trains were held up on various parts of their system.

The company is unable to promise that any trains will be running in County Kerry to-day. The service is held up in the Fermoy district, and also on the Clara and Banagher and the Carlow and Kilkenny branch lines. Some of the main line trains are also affected. These "holds-up" apply not only to passenger trains, but also to goods trains.

SERIOUS CURTAILMENT OF CORK SERVICES.

The railway trouble in Cork is rapidly spreading, and the Cork, Bandon, and South Coast Line is almost closed. The morning train from Cork to Bantry and Skibbereen yesterday, and the morning train from Kinsale to Cork were "held up" owing to a refusal to carry soldiers. The Great Southern and Western Railway announce a restricted service for the South from to-day, while the Cork and Muskerry and Cork, Blackrock, and Passage Railways make similar announcements.

THE POSITION IN LIMERICK.

The Limerick Postmaster yesterday received official intimation that there would be a morning despatch of mails from Limerick Junction for delivery in the city, and that a special train conveying mails from Limerick would leave for the Junction about noon, giving a connection to Dublin, Cork, and the cross-Channel service.

BURNING OF TIPPERARY.

CHIEF SECRETARY AND A TELEGRAM.

AN OFFICIAL DENIAL.

On the motion for the adjournment of the Commons last night,

Mr. Adamson called attention to the following telegram, which, he said, was signed by the Town Clerk of Tipperary:—"Tipperary town being burnt by Crown Forces, who have cut the fire hose and prevented Council's firemen, at the point of the revolver, from using the same." Continuing, Mr. Adamson said that the Chief Secretary would have great difficulty in justifying such a method of government. He asked whether the right hon. gentleman had any information regarding the matter, and what he proposed to do to check action of this character.

Sir Hamar Greenwood said that his defence was that there was not a word of truth in the telegram read out—not a word. As soon as he got a note from Mr. Adamson he "wired" to Dublin Castle, and the authorities communicated by telephone with the town of Tipperary. The telegram read by the right hon. gentleman was sent off at four o'clock, and the telephone message was sent after six o'clock. The telephone message, as it came to him from Dublin Castle, reached him about seven o'clock—"I have just been given a telephone message from the District Inspector at Tipperary, who says that he, personally, and his men helped to extinguish the fires last night, and that there is absolutely no truth in the statement that the town is being burnt down to-day. All is perfectly quiet." The suggestion that the Forces of the Crown cut the hose and prevented the Council's firemen from using it was not true. This telegram was symptomatic of a great deal of the information that came from unofficial quarters. The reason why it came to certain hon. gentlemen was that they were only too anxious to make out that the loyal Forces of the Crown were guilty of these outrages. He could not resume his seat without referring to the record of County Tipperary and Tipperary town during the last two years. He regretted that Mr. Adamson had not a word to say about the brutal murders of policemen in that town and county.

Mr. Adamson—May I remind the Chief Secretary that only on Thursday night, speaking on the third reading of the Government of Ireland Bill, I said specifically that neither I nor the party I represented had any sympathy with murder or reprisals?

Sir Hamar Greenwood replied that the difference between him and the right hon. gentleman was that he (Sir Hamar) thought more of the murder of policemen and soldiers than he did of reprisals. The great issue before the Government was the murder of their servants. In the County of Tipperary, since January 1st, 1919, twenty policemen had been murdered, and 34 wounded. There were seven murders in Tipperary town itself during the same period and three wounded, and on Thursday, within a few miles of Tipperary, four policemen were brutally murdered and two wounded. He wished to emphasise his view that, while he condemned alleged reprisals as much as anyone—(cries of "No," and cheers)—and had taken the most drastic steps to stop them—and he was stopping them, and Sir Nevil Macready had stopped them in the Army—the best thing the House could do was to assist the Government to stop those murders which were a great blot upon the section of the Irish people responsible for them, and he hoped that the eloquence of Mr. Adamson and his friends would be used as much in preventing murder as in condemning reprisals. (Cheers.)

Mr. Devlin denounced the Government as responsible for all that was going on in Ireland.

The House adjourned at 11.30 p.m.

A Tipperary telegram states that at ten o'clock on Monday night the lodging-house kept by Miss Duggan in James's street was set on fire by half a dozen men. The Urban Council's hose was cut, and the fire was beyond all control when the military brigade arrived. Miss Duggan's house had been frequently searched. Mr. McElligott's house, which, it is said, was bombed on the previous night and the stock destroyed, was again bombed and set on fire. Only the walls now remain. An entrance was effected to the Irish House, which was unsuccessfully attacked on the night before, and it was set on fire. The prompt arrival of the military brigade extinguished the outbreak before very great damage was done. At six o'clock yesterday morning an entrance was forced to Mr. Kneeshaw's jewellery establishment in St. Michael street, and it is alleged that the valuable stock was looted. The police closing order remains in force, and creameries are not allowed to receive supplies of milk. There was much bombing and rifle firing during the night, but no injury to life or limb is reported.

INCIDENTS IN THE PROVINCES.

On Sunday night about thirty soldiers visited the Sinn Fein hall at Aughamullan in search for arms.

Military stopped pedestrians and vehicles yesterday at the bridge over the Dargle River at Bray.

On Sunday evening a young man named Keary, when returning from Loughrea, was fired at and wounded on the hand by unknown men.

The college in Ballaghaderreen was searched from top to bottom by Crown Forces on Monday, the party remaining for close on four hours.

A military force carried out a series of raids in the country districts north of Killeagh, in the Youghal district, yesterday, effecting one arrest.

Mails and old age pension money forcibly taken last August from the mail car plying between Limerick and Tulla have been returned to the authorities.

Parties to a land dispute near Carrickmacross were arrested by armed and masked men, and made promise not to further interfere with the land in dispute until the case had been tried in court.

Military and police searched the residences of Mr. J. Everett, Chairman of the Wicklow Urban District Council and member of the County Council, and of Mr. J. Barlow, representative of the National Assurance Society in Wicklow, on Monday night.

On Monday night the Town Clerk of Loughrea on entering the boardroom discovered that the books belonging to the Commissioners were missing. At the last meeting of the Board it was decided by a majority to give permission to the Local Government Board auditor to audit the accounts.

A military inquiry at Cork Barracks into the death of Constable Daniel O'Brien, of Tuckey street Station, Cork, who was killed last Friday in a collision between a lorry and a cart, concluded yesterday. The court found a verdict of accidental death, and attached no blame to anybody.

MILITARY OFFICERS KIDNAPPED.

TAKEN FROM A TRAIN NEAR CORK.

CARRIED OFF BY ARMED MEN.

Our Cork Correspondent, telegraphing last night, says:—Remarkable details have come to hand to-day concerning the kidnapping by Irish Volunteers at Waterfall Station, about five miles from Cork, on Monday of four Staff officers who left Victoria Barracks, Cork, to go to some posts in West Cork. They were dressed in mufti, but their military bearing was unmistakable, and they travelled in a first class compartment.

All went well until Waterfall was reached, when a number of men, armed with revolvers, quickly entered the compartment, and gave the order: "Hands up." As the officers were unarmed they had no alternative but to obey.

They were then escorted to the platform and kept in the station until the train had moved off and the passengers had left the station. Then the leader of the Republicans gave the order, "Quick march," and the officers were marched to the public road, with their captors at their side, holding revolvers in their hands.

It is stated that motor cars were in waiting, and in them the party went to an unknown destination, which is the synonym for a Sinn Fein prison. The names of the officers have not been ascertained.

Large bodies of military and police are scouring the district. Twelve large motor lorries and an armoured car passed through the city from the direction of Waterfall to-day. Apparently the authorities are taking no risks by sending out small detachments, which might be ambushed by the insurgents.

GALWAY PRIEST MISSING.

SUSPECTED CASE OF KIDNAPPING.

Our Galway Correspondent telegraphs:—Responding apparently to a "sick call," the Rev. Michael Griffin, junior Roman Catholic curate for the parishes of Bushy Park and Barna, Galway, went out on Sunday night in the company of three men, who are said to have worn trench coats. He disappeared as completely as if the earth had swallowed him. All efforts to trace his whereabouts have so far proved futile. Mr. Cruise, Divisional Commissioner, R.I.C., declares that he is confident that no member of the Crown forces had anything to do with the clergyman's disappearance. The Rev. Peter Davis, P.P., maintains, with equal confidence, that no Roman Catholic and no Irishman would touch a hair of Father Griffin's head. It was at first thought that the rev. gentleman, finding himself at a far-distant part of the parish, which bends out towards Spiddal, on the coast, and towards Moycullen, on the lake side, had taken refuge from the storm with some neighbouring priest. Answers received to-day to telegrams despatched to all the surrounding parishes have dispelled this hope.

A civilian search party is putting forward every effort to find some trace of the missing clergyman. I understand that Father Davis brought the whole matter under the notice of Brigadier-General Chaplin this evening, and that the attention of all the other units of the Crown forces in the district is to be called to the mysterious circumstances of the disappearance.

MILITARY SEARCHES IN DUBLIN.

PROFESSOR ARRESTED.

Considerable activity was displayed in Dublin yesterday by the military and the Auxiliary division of the Royal Irish Constabulary. Early in the morning many houses in the suburbs were searched, and later in the day visits were paid to houses in the city itself.

Large numbers of troops, who were accompanied by an armoured car, arrived in the vicinity of Longwood avenue, South Circular road, about 7 o'clock, and took up positions at different points in the streets in the locality. One of the houses entered was that of Assistant Professor Michael Hayes, of the University College. Admission was gained through the back door, and a complete search of the house followed. Mr. Hayes was placed under arrest. Another man was also arrested in this avenue. On leaving, the soldiers carried away in one of the lorries several bags, which appeared to contain bundles of papers. It is said that, while the soldiers were searching a house, a man, who was scantily clad, jumped from a window and escaped over the garden wall.

The house of Mr. Patrick Kennedy, spirit grocer, Charlemont street, was later visited, and a thorough search made of the premises. Raids also were carried out in the Ranelagh district, and in Mountpleasant avenue.

The rooms of the Socialist Party of Ireland, in North Great George's street, were searched by Auxiliary Police shortly before noon, and some papers were taken away. The offices of the Irish Women Workers' Union (Domestic Section) were at the same time searched.

A number of houses in North King street and Church street were also searched by soldiers early in the morning, but no arrests or seizures are reported.

SEIZURE OF MILITARY STORES.

An official report, issued yesterday, states that at 10 o'clock on the morning of the 10th inst. a party of fifteen men, armed with revolvers, "held up" the ss. Queenstown, on her way from Aghada to Queenstown, and took 27 packages of military stores consigned to Cork, Dublin, and Tipperary. The raiders came in three rowing boats, and when they approached the vessel one of the party ordered the captain to stop her, discharging at the same time a shot from a revolver. Seeing that the other men in the boats were also armed with revolvers, the captain felt that he had no option but to comply with the order given by what seemed to him to be the leader of the party. The stores were then taken from the Queenstown, and carried away in the boats in which the raiders had rowed to the scene of the attack. Fourteen of the packages have since been recovered.

SEVENTEEN ARRESTS AT KINGSTOWN.

Sixteen members of the Kingstown Sinn Fein Club were arrested on Monday night, when a search was made by a body of the Royal Irish Constabulary and military of the club premises. Mr. Fred. Allan, Secretary to the Dublin Corporation Electric Lighting Committee, was also arrested and taken to the Bridewell. It is estimated that about £400 worth of damage has been done by fire, etc., in the building, which comprises the Sinn Fein Club premises, Messrs. Goodwin's, and the Blanchardstown Mill Stores.

A DONEGAL ROAD TRENCH.

It is officially stated that a Ford van, belonging to Messrs. Kane and Smyth, Belfast, ran into a deep trench cut across the roadway at Nenagh Valley, Killybegs, Co. Donegal, a few days ago, and was badly damaged. The object of cutting a trench in the roadway was, it is believed, to hold up military and police patrols in the district.

BOMB-THROWING IN LIMERICK.

Our Limerick Correspondent, telegraphing last night, says:—About nine o'clock on Monday night a bomb was flung into the licensed premises of Mr. P. Walshe, Bedford row, whose place was searched some time ago. The door of the shop stood ajar, and through the aperture the bomb was thrown, causing a loud explosion and damaging the shop. Mrs. Walshe, who was in the shop, had a narrow escape, and a man was injured, but not seriously.

THE SEARCH IN THE LIMERICK JESUIT COLLEGE.

Following the search at the Crescent College and presbytery, in Limerick, on Thursday night during "Curfew" hours, by three armed and partly disguised men, the Very Rev. Father Potter, S.J., rector, wrote to the County Inspector, Royal Irish Constabulary, for an explanation of the occurrence. The County Inspector, in his reply, assured Father Potter that the raid was not carried out by his orders, or by the police under his control. Yesterday morning a police officer called on Father Potter, from whom he made inquiries concerning the matter. The rector, it is understood, is also writing to the Officer Commanding the troops in the city.

MOTOR CAR STOLEN FROM CORK GARAGE.

On Monday evening the garage of Messrs. Collins and Morrogh, Merchant street, Cork, was forcibly entered, and property value for £500 carried off, including an Austin motor car. Judging from the thoroughness with which the garage was searched, the burglars must have spent a considerable time on the premises.

SPECIAL EXTRA.

FRANCE AND THE VATICAN.

A Reuter's Paris telegram of Tuesday says:—The Chamber of Deputies had before it to-day the financial proposals connected with the bill for re-establishing a French Embassy at the Holy See. M. Noblemaire, the reporter of the Commission of Finance, introduced the proposals, and said that the non-Catholic countries of Great Britain and the Netherlands were represented at the Vatican, adding:—While France is talking, Germany is acting, and had appointed an Ambassador to the Vatican as far back as April this year.

M. Herriot, the Socialist Mayor of Lyons, bitterly opposed the proposal, and declared that France would again be accused of sectarianism, whereas she was faithful to her declaration of the Droits de l'Homme. Amid many interruptions, M. Herriot declared that the measure recognised not the spiritual, but the temporal power of the Pope. While attacking the proposal, and dissociating himself entirely from the policy of rapprochement with Rome, M. Herriot paid a graceful tribute to Cardinal Mercier for his attitude in connection with German atrocities.

BIG AMERICAN OIL CONTRACT.

A Reuter's telegram, dated New York, Tuesday, says:—The Standard Oil Company of New York has concluded a contract with the Mexican Petroleum Company, by which the latter company is to deliver 150,000,000 barrels of gasoline during the next year. The price is not given. The order is one of the largest on record.

BOLSHEVISM AND THE NEAR EAST.

A Reuter's Paris telegram of Tuesday says:—Commenting on the Greek elections, the Temps asks: What is the present situation in the Near East? The Bolshevists have no one left before them. The Turkish Nationalists, who crushed Armenia and are menacing Georgia, are moving in agreement with the Bolshevists. Thrace, Gallipoli, Smyrna, and Western Asia Minor are in the hands of Greece, who will have at her head a Germanophile King, because the Crown Prince, who is a nephew of the ex-Kaiser, is no less a German Hohenzollern than ex-King Constantine. The Near East is, therefore, shared between Lenin, Mustapha, Kemal, and a Hohenzollern. That is what the Allies have done with their victory.

FRENCH CABINET CHANGES.

A Reuter's telegram dated Paris, Tuesday, says:—Unfounded rumours that M. Lefevre, Minister of War, persisted in his decision to resign, aroused considerable gossip and speculation this afternoon in the lobbies of the Chamber, where it was stated that he would be replaced by M. Maginot, whose post as Minister of Pensions would then be filled by M. Thoumyre, Under Secretary of State for Food Supply. In this eventuality it is expected that the Ministry of Food will be abolished.

BELGIUM'S UNKNOWN WARRIOR.

A Reuter's telegram, dated Brussels, Tuesday, says:—The newspapers state that a proposal will be made in the Chamber for the exhumation and transfer to Brussels of the remains of an unknown soldier, for interment in a tomb to be erected in front of the Law Courts here.

MR. LLOYD GEORGE.

The Times Correspondent at Genova, telegraphing on Tuesday, says:—I understand that Mr. Lloyd George is expected in Geneva within the next few days. He will stay at the villa of Mrs. Barton, widow of the former British Consul, whose name is well known to visitors to Geneva as that of the donor of the Victoria Hall. Presumably the Prime Minister will act as British Delegate in place of Mr. Balfour, but his intentions are not yet definitely known.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS MEETING.

A Press Association telegram, dated Geneva, November 16th, says:—Your correspondent is informed that in British circles the proceedings of the Assembly of the League of Nations are considered to be going far better than was anticipated, in view of the great number of different views involved, and the fact that so many delegates are meeting for the first time. A very good spirit is being displayed, and it is regarded as a proof of the success of the meetings that so many proposals, coming from different countries, have been accepted. What may appear to be trivial details are really important, when it is remembered that an entirely new structure is being built up. In fact, so far things could not have gone better. There have been no unpleasant incidents, and the best of good temper prevails.

SIR CHARLES MONRO'S DEPARTURE FROM SIMLA.

After a series of functions, official and semi-official, General Sir Charles and Lady Monro on Saturday morning made a remarkable public departure from Simla for Bombay, from which they sail on November 20th. Sir Charles's departure is sincerely regretted in all quarters. The recent congratulations sent him from the War Council have given great satisfaction at the Army Headquarters, as well as in the Army and generally in India, in consequence of his written measures for the improvement and welfare of the Army, which have been countless. The most criticism against his administration is that secrecy has been maintained regarding military operations, but this policy has been remedied to a considerable extent lately.

IRISH CROPS AND LIVE STOCK IN 1920.

INTERESTING STATISTICS.

The "Monthly Statistical Statement," issued by the Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction for Ireland in an article on "Irish Crops and Live Stock, 1920," says:—The total area under corn crops was about 100,000 acres smaller than in 1919, but was nearly 300,000 acres more than in 1916. Wheat and oats showed substantial decreases in acreage from 1919 to 1920, while barley showed a large increase. Little change took place from 1919 to 1920 in the area under the various green crops. Turnips, mangels and cabbage showed small increases, and potatoes and other green crops small decreases. Flax was very considerably increased in extent in 1920, while the area under hay decreased slightly. The total area under tillage crops and hay, although a little less than a year ago, was nearly half a million acres greater than in 1916.

All classes of live stock increased in number as compared with 1919, with the exception of cattle, which showed a negligible decrease. The number of milch cows remained practically unaltered, while heifers-in-calf increased by over 20 per cent. Following the decline during recent years small increases took place in all classes of sheep, the total being about 2 per cent. greater than in 1919. The total number of pigs showed a further slight increase; sows kept for breeding were, however, more numerous by about 5 per cent. The total number of horses returned is the highest ever recorded.

THE HAY CROP.

A statement showing the total production of the hay crop has just been issued. The average yield per statute acre in 1920 is estimated at 2.2 tons as compared with 1.9 tons in each of the three preceding years, and an average of 2.0 tons for the ten years 1910-19; the total production at 5,547,271 tons in 1920 as compared with 4,809,645 tons in 1919, and an average of 4,958,471 tons for the ten years 1910-19. The total production of the hay crop in 1920 is higher than in any year on record with the exception of 1910.

IRISH RAILWAY CRISIS.

on the industrial scrap heap. Taking a moderate estimate of the families it would mean 45,000 persons left to be catered for out of the public purse or something else. Factories might be closed down, and that would swell the ranks of the unemployed. Farmers with a few cattle and sheep for the Christmas fair might find these left on their hands for want of buyers. People could not live without money. Mock heroics would not keep them alive. The state of the crops in the country was never so poor as to-day. An Irish railwaymen's congress might be called or a ballot taken of their members as to whether they were willing to carry on the fight. But if it was forced on the railwaymen the onus for their position must rest heavily on the present congress.

Miss Bennett (Irish Women Workers) said that up to that day she had doubts on account of the children as to what action should be taken, but she had heard her nephews and nieces talking about what they would have to say to their children. It should not be left in the power of the children to say that their parents kept them clothed but sold their honour. Irish workers were prepared to meet hardship for a big principle.

Another female delegate said that when the situation was faced bravely it might not be such a great disaster at all. "Hit the grub of the English," she said, "and you have them on the hip." If they wanted to go back they should not put it on the women and children.

Miss McCarthy, of Waterford, was also in favour of carrying on the fight.

Miss Cahalan said it would be cowardly to put women and children forward as a reason for scrapping all their principles.

Mr. Barry (Cork N.U.R.) said that he represented from 450 to 500 members, and it was their wish that, having made a fight, they should not now knuckle down. It was the policy of Irishmen to defeat the British Government's policy, and they considered that now was the time to do so. As it was the aim and object of the Ministry of Transport to starve the people, it was now the duty of the railwaymen to keep open the arteries through which the country's life blood flowed. The members of his branch, keeping before them the fact that if the Irish railways ceased to run they were faced with starvation, and, such being the case, just as the hungry soldier could not fight, neither could a hungry nation exist. (Applause.)

TWO VIEWS FROM DERRY.

Mr. P. O'Donnell (Derry) said that the workers of Ireland were at war with Britain, and the stopping or the re-opening of the railways was not the last word in that struggle. If the railways were going to re-open to-morrow, was any delegate going to suggest that the burning of factories and houses was going to cease? Were they going to hawk these fellows about the country in order to make it easier for them to get where they wanted to go?

Mr. Limerick (Derry N.U.R.) said that he had come there with a unanimous mandate for peace from the railwaymen of Londonderry, not one of whose meetings had been attended by Mr. O'Donnell.

The Chairman—Mr. O'Donnell claims to represent the workers of Derry, and never said that he spoke for the railwaymen.

Mr. Limerick said that he had called a meeting of his branch in Derry, and put the whole question definitely and clearly before the men. After debating the question for two hours they unanimously came to the conclusion that it was better at this stage to have peace, seeing that they had fought a good fight and carried on the battle for a considerable length of time, yet without preventing a single atom of munitions from coming into the country. His (Mr. Limerick's) mission that day was to appeal for peace, and to ask the Congress not to be carried away by the high-flown speeches of men who had no stake in the country, and nothing at all to lose. (Applause and interruption.)

Mr. Walsh (Cork N.U.R.) said that they had first put an embargo on barbed wire, but that was withdrawn after a while. As to the Conference in the Court of Conscience last week, that was the place for any man who did not agree with its decision to have given expression to his views.

Mr. O'Byrne (Bagenalstown) said that this was not entirely a workers' question, and he thought the whole matter should be referred to the various public Boards of Ireland. It was for these Boards to decide whether this fight should or should not be carried on.

THE CORK CHAMBER'S RESOLUTION.

The Conference adjourned till three o'clock.

When the Congress resumed at 3.15 o'clock, Mr. T. Johnson read a telegram from the Cork Chamber of Commerce stating that a general meeting protested against the threatened closing down of the railways of the country and the limitation of motor services. There was a unanimous expression of opinion that Irish railway directors should work the railways notwithstanding the Government threat to withdraw subsidies, believing such action would be supported by stockholders and employés, who they believed would be prepared to make any sacrifice to prevent such a national disaster. The wire was signed—"Cleary, Sec."

Mr. J. Carr, of the Limerick Trades Council, said he had no mandate from his organisation in regard to the dispute. He thought they should turn their attention to ways and means for the support of the railwaymen. They already had sufficient oratory, and the time for action in supporting the men had arrived.

Mr. McKeown, Mullingar branch, N.U.R., favoured an honourable settlement, pointing out the difficulties that would follow a shut down of the railways. As an experiment they sent to Dublin a motor lorry for three tons of coal. The expenses of bringing it to Mullingar amounted to £11, and the cost of the coal £13 10s. 0d. What, he asked, would the coal cost before it reached the workers? It was all right for seaport towns to talk about getting supplies, but how would people 40 to 60 miles from a seaport get supplies with "Black and Tans" knocking about? Railwaymen were being blamed as being responsible for the high price of cattle, etc. He suggested that the Lord Mayor of Dublin, Mr. Arthur Griffith, representing Dail Eireann; Mr. Thomas, M.P., the railwaymen, and Mr. T. Johnson, of the Labour Party, should come forward and make an honourable settlement. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. Antony (Cork) agreed with the previous speaker, arguing that it was the proper course to take. He said that no constructive policy had been placed before them as to how they were to meet the military machine of England. (Hear, hear.) In this matter they should face realities, and not be carried away by appeals to sentiment.

THE RESOLUTION.

Mr. Thomas Farren said that the railwaymen of Ireland should be proud of the part they had played during this dispute. In many cases, with revolvers presented at their temples, they still asserted their manhood. (Applause.) The discussion that had taken place showed that the delegates were fully alive to their responsibilities. The Executive also were alive to their responsibilities, and, after weighing up the whole facts of the case, they were of opinion that the fight should go on. But they must make preparations to carry it on successfully. It was stated that 15,000 railwaymen would be out of employment, but there would be more than 150,000 other workers involved, so that if the fight were continued it would not be only a fight of railwaymen, but a fight of the nation, and the whole resources of the people would have to be thrown into it. The Lord Mayor of Dublin should call into being a committee representative of all sections of the people. Resolutions had been passed by some branches of the railwaymen, which were uncalled for, and were a gross libel. The Executive did not act in an autocratic way. He moved:—

That this All-Ireland Conference of Labour delegates, representing all trades and sections of the Irish working classes, endorse the action of the National Executive in calling us together in the crisis arising from the threat to close down the railways. We recognise that the action of the railway and dock workers in refusing on their own initiative, and without outside pressure, to handle weapons of war or convey armed men on the railways was a decision inspired by patriotic and unselfish motives, and that the country has freely and generously supplied the funds necessary to sustain the men in their struggle. We also realise fully the sacrifices that will be entailed by continuance of the resistance against the tyranny should the railwaymen adhere to their decision, and we solemnly call on all our fellow-citizens of all classes to throw all their resources of wealth and services into the struggle, and we authorise the National Executive to appoint representatives on the Lord Mayor's Committee to act with other representative citizens on the Committee to organise the defence and preservation of the national life now being menaced by the withdrawal of transport facilities at the order of the British military authorities.

Mr. Hickey (Cork Dockers) seconded the resolution, and said that he did not do so out of mere bravado, but as the outcome of moral right. He did not dispute one word of what Mr. Johnson had said. They were fighting for a moral ideal, and therefore he had great pleasure in seconding the motion.

Mr. Hennessey (Inchicore) said that he had been disappointed with the resolution, which did not name any definite committee. It was true it mentioned that the Lord Mayor was to get up a committee, but the proposal put forward by Mr. McKeown (Mullingar) was a better proposition. If the railwaymen had got to continue the fight they would fall into line, but there was no use in disguising the fact that serious differences of opinion existed even in the same localities. Why had the change that was apparent in the minds of delegates that day taken place? It was true that so far the railwaymen were the only men who had gone into this fight with any determination, and it was also true that some of the speakers who were employed on the railways had facilitated these men, and had come to the men who had refused to carry weapons and war munitions—he referred to the members of the Railway Clerks' Association who had on many occasions issued tickets to these people whom other people refused to carry. (Hear, hear.) It was better that they should understand that the whole trade union movement should be in this fight. (Hear, hear.) He understood that a representative body of traders wished that day to say a word to the Conference, and that Mr. Johnson did not consider it right that they should do so. The matter should be taken up by the people of Ireland if they wished to carry it to a successful issue. If the fight was to go on every trade union and every other body of people would have to step in and take their part in the fight. (Hear, hear.) If they thought they could commandeer the foodstuffs of the country they never made a greater mistake.

AN AMENDMENT.

Mr. Kelleher (Athlone) said that he had an amendment to propose. The workers could not take it on themselves to decide for the nation as a whole. The fight had now reached a new phase—they had not got the people who owned the food and the property at their back in this fight, and they should be cautious that they did not step in between the people who owned the food and the Government. They should be very cautious, because whatever they decided, they would be blamed. Therefore it was for the nation to decide. It was not patriotism to rush into a military barracks and ask to be shot down, and it would be wiser to defeat the new tactics. Certain public bodies in his district had deserted their posts—there were only five members at a meeting of the Board of Guardians, and no poor relief was issued, while at the Urban Council only four members attended, and cheques could not be signed, and the pay sheets could not be passed. When certain shopkeepers were threatened by the forces of the Crown, what did they do? He had known them to go to the military barracks for protection. If they went out to commandeer food to-morrow the shopkeepers would again go to the military barracks. He proposed, as an amendment:—

That, as the railwaymen at their conference on Tuesday, 9th inst., decided that, being only a section of the workers of Ireland, they could not decide a question affecting the workers as a whole, this conference, only representing a section of the Irish people, cannot decide a question affecting the whole nation, and, therefore, this Congress refers the question to a meeting representative of every section of the Irish people, whose duty it is to review the situation, and to make provision for those whose sole means of existence is jeopardised.

Mr. Kenny (Broadstone) seconded the amendment, and said that he would be very much disappointed if the Congress was going to assist the Government in shutting down the railways.

Miss Moloney (Irish Women Workers) said that it was nonsense to discuss the suggestion that a deputation should wait on the directors of the railways, who were only puppets in the hands of the Government. She supported the resolution.

Mr. Irwin (Dublin) said that he did not think that the railwaymen were anxious to get into the trenches. Mr. Bermingham did not tell them that they wanted a fight or to continue the fight to a finish. They wanted to know what exactly was in the minds of the railwaymen themselves. He said that the railwaymen should ballot, and say whether they wanted this fight or not or whether they would continue it, and not talk about the people of property, from whom they never got much support.

Mr. Mitchell (Automobile Drivers' Association) said that the country was able to fight this issue if it was fought to a finish. If it was fought on the same lines as conscription was, the Government was bound to stand back.

A QUESTION OF TACTICS.

Mr. Cathal O'Shannon said that the fight might mean the lives of five out of ten of the people from Newry to Cork. And they were facing that. It might be a question of tactics, and no one could accuse the Executive of not knowing the tactics to use successfully in the past. All the tanks, machine guns, "Black and Tans," and bombs could not in the long run win out against the new weapon if they decided to adopt it.

Mr. James Hughes (Transport Workers) said that there underlay this fight a Labour principle of the first importance. The fight should be carried on.

Mr. Holohan (Dublin) said that he held that the railwaymen should decide for themselves whether they were to continue the fight or not.

The Chairman remarked that no one in the Labour movement wanted to take from the railwaymen any of their rights. If they wanted to decide their own issue, there was no compulsion on them.

Mr. Redmond (Irish Engineering Union) said that he believed that the railwaymen were prepared to abide by the decision of the Executive.

THE VOTING.

At this stage the Chairman suggested that the matter had been sufficiently discussed, and that they might take a vote.

This was agreed to.

The resolution moved by Mr. Farren was then read, together with the amendment. The mover of the latter thereupon withdrew it in favour of the resolution.

A further suggestion by Mr. Murphy (Bray) as to a ballot of railway workers and the calling of a further meeting was ruled by the Chairman not to be an amendment.

The resolution was then put to the meeting and a show of hands taken.

A couple of voices called out "Unanimous," but the Chairman asked those opposed to the motion to hold up their hands. He then declared the resolution carried, with two dissentients.

The result was loudly cheered.

Mr. Johnson said that he had been asked by the National Executive to move a resolution which was of serious import to trade unionism as such. It was prepared in view of the contingency that such a resolution as had just been passed might be passed, and it asked organised labour in Ireland to make the initial sacrifice. It was:—"That this Conference of trade union representatives, called together to deal with the crisis involved in the threatened close down of the railways, recognising the gravity of the situation that faces the country and the necessity for all sections of the people to rally to the defence and preservation of the national life, earnestly urges upon the trade unions presently involved in strikes for improved conditions of labour to withdraw their demands without prejudice to future action."

Mr. Kelly seconded the resolution, which was passed.

AN IRISH SETTLEMENT.

Alderman William O'Brien said that they had just decided on a certain issue of which the wisest among them could hardly tell the ultimate effect. Personally, he had the fullest confidence that their side would survive. He made reference to a recent pronouncement of Mr. Adamson on behalf of the English Labour Party with which they should express complete agreement. He moved the following resolution:

This Conference, representative of organised Labour in Ireland, welcomes the statement of policy made by the Leader of the Labour Party in the House of Commons (Mr. Adamson), speaking on behalf of the British Labour movement, in declaring for:—

(1) The withdrawal of the British armed forces from Ireland.

(2) The calling of a constituent assembly elected on the basis of proportional representation by a free, equal, and secret vote.

(3) That such assembly should draw up a constitution for Ireland on the understanding that such constitution shall be made operative, subject only to two conditions—namely, that it affords protection to minorities, and that the constitution shall prevent Ireland from becoming a military or naval menace.

This Conference declares, on behalf of the Irish Labour movement, its readiness to advocate the acceptance of this policy as being the fulfilment of Ireland's demand for the right to choose and decide its own form of Government, and assures the British workers that the realisation of the policy outlined will lead to good will and fraternity between the two peoples. And, further, we endorse the statement already made by our National Executive to the leaders of the British trade union movement, that the only obstacle to peace and good order in Ireland is the present of the British armed forces; and we endorse with confidence the assurance they have given that the withdrawal of these forces from any district, leaving responsibility and power for the maintenance of order to the popularly elected representatives, will secure peace and good government in that district.

Mr. J. J. White (Shop Assistants'), seconded the resolution.

Mr. O'Farrell (R.C.A.) said that there was an intense desire to see this question settled on an honourable basis. Instead of judging and condemning British Labour leaders they should try and educate them to the position, for they had no means of obtaining information except from a polluted English Press. When the British Labour Party visited Ireland they should get every facility and be afforded every information.

Mr. Bermingham, on behalf of the railwaymen, associated himself with the resolution.

The resolution was carried unanimously.

Mr. Johnson said that he had no doubt that most of the towns had been already working, and had taken a census of the returns and the requirements in the nature of food available in their localities. They had got when they returned home to reinforce their local committees to take up the work enthusiastically, and very seriously, indeed, and be ready to act on the advice and instructions which might be sent them from the Central Committee which was being formed. The working element should take its full, if not a dominant, share in the responsibility of the work, because the work in front of them would fall very largely upon the active endeavours of organised labour. They had got to make sure without being too aggressive or so definite that there was no hoarding of supplies in rich men's cellars, and there were not more than normal stocks going into particular houses. They had got to make it clear to the owner of property that they have to put their resources at the disposal of the country. They had got to make clear to shopkeepers, merchants and manufacturers that "profiteering," taking advantage of the shortness of the requirements of the community would be severely punished. Let them make that clear at the beginning without aggression, without unnecessary emphasis, and he thought that some of the trouble that had been anticipated would not arise. Lay it down firmly that "profiteering" and taking advantage of the interests of the people would not be condoned. They had got to make preparations for living on the locality as far as possible, and to call into the aid of the local committee every available resource in property, stores, and in service. There was talk of unemployment probably, and by the decision which had been come to; but it was not essential that unemployment would continue if they re-organised the employment. He thought that fact, if taken hold of, would go far to remove many of the fears of privations that had been prophesied. They should now use the earnestness of their workers of all ranks and sections.

THE RAILWAY CRISIS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

Sir,—Mr. Arthur Griffith the other day gave the sound advice to the hunger-strikers in Cork Prison to "live for Ireland." Perhaps, the Acting President of the Irish Republic will now give to us railway workers the equally prudent "straight tip" to "work for Ireland." The two actions are painfully interdependent so far as we workers are concerned.—Yours, etc.,

"Guard."

EXHIBITION OF CHRYSANTHEMUMS IN DUBLIN.

Through the kindness of Mr. and Mrs. John Good, a delightful exhibition of chrysanthemums is being held each afternoon this week at The Moorings, Merrion road, Ballsbridge, in aid of the funds of the Meath and Sir Patrick Dun's Hospitals. The exhibition of blooms is quite up to the usual standard of excellence which has given pleasure to so many in past years. Lovers of chrysanthemums will find beautiful specimens of such well-known Japanese varieties as "Undaunted" and "Salonica," also of "Mrs. R. S. Pulling," a large and beautiful incurved yellow. There are lovely blooms of "Edith Cavell," a rich bronze; and no exhibition would be complete without "Queen Mary," an exquisite soft white of immense size, and a winner of more prizes than any other variety.

The first house is devoted entirely to large blooms, and seldom does an opportunity arise for seeing such a choice collection of well-known varieties. The adjoining house is devoted to what might be termed decorative varieties, and here there is a wealth of blooms and a variety of colour that is very charming. Amongst these are "Descartes," "Donald," "Sylvia Slade," and "Mary Richardson," to mention only a few, which are delightful singles, with a number of sprays suitable for cutting.

The exhibition will be continued each afternoon this week from 3 to 6 p.m., when, it is hoped, many will avail themselves of the opportunity of visiting The Moorings. Tea is provided by Mrs. John Good, assisted by a number of lady helpers, a fact which adds very much to the pleasure of the visit.

Salford Corporation yesterday declined to let the Town Hall for a meeting to be addressed by Archbishop Mannix on Sunday next.

IRISH QUESTIONS IN PARLIAMENT.

AMBUSHES OF MILITARY LORRIES.

Mr. Churchill, replying to Mr. Pennefather in the House of Commons yesterday, stated that soldiers on military duty in Ireland, travelling in motor cars and lorries, had been attacked by rebels in ambush on 99 occasions since June 30th last. Thirty had been killed, 90 wounded, and 98 captured or disarmed, and it was believed that heavy losses had been inflicted on the rebels. They had captured 35 rifles, two Hotchkiss guns, and 4,000 rounds of ammunition. The question of providing armoured cars for use in Ireland was seriously engaging the attention of the military authorities. Large numbers of cars, armed with machine guns, were already in Ireland, and steps were being taken to increase them considerably.

Mr. Pennefather asked why it was that these cars were not sent after the first or second ambush, instead of waiting until the 99th occasion.

Mr. Churchill replied that the number of armoured cars in Ireland had been steadily increased. That had been the policy pursued without cessation during the last five or six months. The military authorities were now supplying sheets of armour, which would be put on vehicles which were only occasionally used for the transport of men in dangerous districts.

HOUSE-BURNING IN TIPPERARY.

Mr. Devlin asked the Chief Secretary for Ireland whether his attention had been called to the wilful burning and destruction of five houses in the town of Tipperary by men, armed with revolvers, on the previous morning, and whether he had any statement to make about this latest outrage.

Sir Hamar Greenwood said that he had received a telegraphic statement that five houses had been burned in the town of Tipperary on the previous morning. The local police had no knowledge as to the persons responsible (ironical cheers), but they were making inquiries.

THE DUBLIN SHOOTING.

Mr. T. P. O'Connor asked the Chief Secretary for Ireland if it was a fact that, in the case of the death by shooting of the 12-year-old girl, Annie O'Neill, in Dublin, a coroner's inquest was refused; whether, at the military court, the bereaved mother, who applied to be legally represented, had this request refused, and her solicitor was denied admission to the court; whether the officer who shot the girl brought any evidence to prove that the men whom he was pursuing were armed; whether the crowd that remained behind were searched, and no arms found upon them, and what precautions he proposed to take to prevent such lamentable occurrences as the death of this girl, and of Mrs. Quin taking place.

Sir Hamar Greenwood said that a military court of inquiry was held in this case on Monday, and the proceedings had not yet been confirmed. Meantime he was not in a position to give any information as to the alleged refusal of legal representation, or as to the evidence given before the inquiry. He repeated that, so long as the armed forces of the Crown were liable to attack by assassins, unfortunate tragedies, such as the present one, were inevitable. He regretted, owing to the shortness of the notice, not being able to give the fullest possible answer to the question, but he hoped he had done his best.

Mr. Devlin—Are these courts of inquiry open to the Press?

Sir Hamar Greenwood—The rule as to courts of inquiry held in lieu of inquests is that, whether they are open to the public or not, is a matter for the discretion of the court, and the reason that guides them is the safety of the witnesses.

Replying to further questions, Sir Hamar Greenwood said that these military inquiries in lieu of inquests were held in public. They could always be held in public at the discretion of the officers of the court. He could not, and would not, interfere with the discretion of those officers if they saw fit to exclude the public, for he was certain that they would never exclude the public without good reason involving the security of the lives of the witnesses.

Mr. Devlin—Are we to understand that when soldiers are charged with killing innocent civilians, the only court before which these charges are investigated is a military, and that that military court decides that the Press is not to be admitted?

Sir Hamar Greenwood—The answer is no.

IRISH FOOD EXPORTS.

Major Lloyd Greame writes, in reply to Major Glyn, that the average weekly value of imports into Great Britain from Ireland in 1918 was £2,930,000, of which £1,317,000 represented imports of food (exclusive of drink) and food animals. The corresponding figures for 1919 were £3,348,000 and £1,445,000, respectively. No later figures could be given, as values were only computed for a whole year. It was, however, believed that the present average weekly value of the imports of food into Great Britain from Ireland was greater than the average of 1919. A stoppage of Irish railways would naturally be followed by the cessation of exports of foodstuffs from the districts affected.

THE HOUSING OF TROOPS

Replying to Mr. Kenyon, Mr. Churchill said that he was informed that some troops in Ireland were accommodated in hired public and private buildings. They were not billeted, in the ordinary sense of the word. They were selected, according to the military situation, and so as to cause as little disturbance to the owners as possible. Claims to compensation by the owners or occupiers were considered and dealt with on their merits.

SOLDIERS AND REPRISALS.

Replying to Mr. Briant, Mr. Churchill said that he was informed that no trials had been held of soldiers for being concerned in alleged reprisals in Ireland. Trials had been held and other action had been taken where soldiers had been guilty of offences against discipline on occasions when such allegations had been made against them, but it had never been proved that any individual soldier had actually taken any part in such reprisals.

THE BARBIZON PAINTERS.

HERMIONE LECTURES, 1920.

Dr. Tancred Borenius, Lecturer in the History of Art at the University of London, already well known in Dublin, began his series of four "Hermione Lectures," on French painting, at Alexandra College, Dublin, yesterday, dealing with the chief fruits of the Barbizon, or Fontainbleau, School.

Almost all of the school which collected about the village of Barbizon, said the lecturer, were devoted wholly to landscape work, choosing their subjects from the scenery of the Fontainbleau neighbourhood. Corot (1796-1875) was a genius who issued from the rivalry of insipid landscape painters for the Rome prize in 1817. His earliest work on Italian subjects, or heroic landscapes with figures, showed a clinging to the style of Poussin's landscapes—large, simple lines and masses producing an effect of noble dignity. Delicate handling of atmospheric form was as characteristic of his art as was the feeling of rhythm and harmony of design. Corot coined the expression of value in the suggestion of tone, which had since become a household word in painting. Developing, he ceased to swathe his landscapes in the grave mood, and his touch became more fleecy. The works of his second manner had great charm, but, producing them as he did, in astonishing quantities, it could not be denied that they tended to somewhat of monotony. He was also active as a figure painter, and in that stage his development bore close analogies to his career as a landscape painter. Another member of the school was Michel (1763-1843), who, from an able restorer of old Dutch paintings, became himself a painter of excellent landscapes. In spite of the affinity between his work and that of the other Barbizon artists, however, it was doubtful whether he influenced them. Dupré and Rousseau (both born 1812) were both exemplars of the school. Dupré returned from studying in England with an undoubted resemblance to the English landscape painters. With Rousseau he explored France for subjects. Early in his career Rousseau was so systematically excluded from the Salon that he became known as "The Great Rejected," but a pleasing firmness of design, suggestion of atmospheric form, and great intimacy of feeling was in all his work. He loved trees with a personal love, and his art showed that. The landscape art of another, Diaz, was very high, but far greater was D'Aubigny's. For the heavy massing, which was characteristic of Rousseau, D'Aubigny substituted a greater lightness of touch and a more free hand. After his visit to England (under Turner) his striving for delicacy of atmospheric tone became more and more apparent. He was the connecting link between the Barbizon School (1830) and the impressionists (1860). Nathaniel Hone was the only man on this side who came under the influence of that school. There was no English representative. The last of the chief Frenchmen of the school was Millet, who ranked as one of the most remarkable figures of modern art. The works which entitled him to that distinction were his scenes of peasant life. That he underlined his impressions rather heavily—and for this he had been taken to task—it was no use disregarding. He had a tendency towards a rather too easy flow of line, which in a manner undermined the effect of his undeniable power of simple design. But, in spite of all the criticism he had had on account of his sentimentality, he remained as a great figure who had said things to them in a way that no other man had. "The Sower" was the most important in this sense; there was something majestic in it.

The lecture was illustrated.

Admiral Sir James Ferguson, Commander-in-Chief of the British Naval Squadron at Danzig, arrived at Hangoe on Saturday last on board the cruiser Delhi, accompanied by a destroyer.

AUDACIOUS ROBBERIES IN DUBLIN.

PEMBROKE BANK OFFICIALS HELD UP.

OVER £2,000 STOLEN.

At 1.15 p.m. yesterday three armed men entered the Pembroke Branch of the National Bank, Dublin, and stole over £2,000. The description of the men conforms with that of the robbers who took about £700 from the Dublin Savings Bank, Lower Abbey street, Dublin, on Saturday night. They were well dressed, and wore trench coats and soft hats, and, walking unobtrusively into the bank, they produced revolvers and "held up" Mr. Heard, the cashier, and two other officials, including a lady clerk, and also a lady customer. Two of the men went behind the counter while the third kept guard on the other side. Only about eight minutes elapsed from the time that the men entered the bank until they left it. The greater portion of the money taken was in notes, and only a small quantity of silver formed part of the "booty." The men came out of the bank after the robbery and walked leisurely along Baggot street, in the direction of Pembroke road, but were afterwards lost from sight. No trace of them or the money has since been discovered.

ASHTOWN PUBLICAN ROBBED.

CASH AND CHEQUES CARRIED AWAY.

The licensed premises of Mr. Peter Kelly, known as "The Half-Way House," Ashtown, were entered on Sunday night, and cheques for sums totalling approximately £800, and £25 in cash, were taken away. It appears that four armed men knocked at the door at 11 o'clock at night, and were admitted on the subterfuge of representing themselves as "Secret Service men." They got possession of the keys, but ordered Mr. Kelly to open the safe, and then took the cheques and cash. They threatened the occupants of the house with death if they left the premises before ten minutes to twelve. It is understood that payment of the cheques has been stopped. No arrests have been made, and the identity of the raiders is not known.

THE WITHDRAWAL OF TREASURY GRANTS.

Wicklow County Council decided yesterday that, in view of the stoppage of Government grants to the Council, they could not in future pay expenses and salaries incurred in semi-Governmental departments, and that those affected be informed that this regrettable action was due to the refusal of the British Treasury to fulfil their liabilities. They further decided to have no further communication with the English Local Government Board, and to refuse to repay loans, rents for courthouses and salaries to court-keepers, the printing and advertising of the Crown office, the conveyance of prisoners, weights and measures expenses, the Sub-Sheriff's salary, repayment of loans on Arklow Technical Schools, Wicklow Harbour, Bray-Wicklow road, Rathdown road improvements, etc.

In a report to the Council, the Secretary stated that the loss of grants amounted to £25,000; the repayments totalled £13,000, and other expenses would reach about £5,000, leaving about £7,000 additional burden on the rates. He advised a quicker collection of the second moiety of the rates, and earlier preparation of next year's estimates.

FINANCES OF ENNIS BOARD OF GUARDIANS.

The Ennis Board of Guardians—Mr. D. McNamara presiding—have had before them the report from their Clerk, Mr. J. Quin, on the finances of the Union, which showed that the Board were in debt to their treasurer to the end of October to the amount of £1,200, and the deficit to date amounted almost to £1,600, and would be monthly increasing. They would find themselves £4,000 on the wrong side in March. He pointed out the causes of this situation—that all commodities had increased, salaries increased, and also outdoor relief. He recommended giving effect to the suggestions of the County Council discharge all able-bodied inmates and chronic cases from hospital, etc., and the temporary reduction of officers' salaries. It was absolutely necessary for expenditure to be reduced by at least one-third, compared with the last half-year, to get them out of their present financial difficulties, failing which, he said, you will have to close down the institution in the month of February, if not sooner.

The report was fully discussed, and the officers consented to allow their salaries to remain at the disposal of the Guardians until January, when payment would be made in full.

All inmates will be inspected with the view to the selection of those that can be discharged.

DOMINION HOME RULE.

At the meeting of the Thomas Davis Society held in the D.B.C., Dame street, Dublin, last night, Professor Culverwell presiding, the question of Dominion Home Rule was discussed. A letter was read from Sir Horace Plunkett, in which the writer said that Ireland must be united by a scheme of Government which gave her the fullest scope for development, not to two nations, but to the complementary qualities and capacities which prevail in the two main divisions of the nation. They must not be enemies of the English people. The Dominion plan has proved that it could establish ideal relations between England and peoples who formerly had misgivings, and it could also settle the Ulster question.

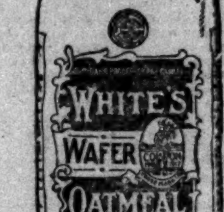
Several of those present took part in the discussion, and the Chairman, in winding up the discussion, said that the solution of the Irish question would have to be evolved from the Irish people themselves.

White's Wafer Oatmeal.

IT is the food we eat which provides the two fundamental needs of the body—heat and waste repair.

The quantity of these materials which the body requires can be as accurately calculated as the amount of gas that passes through the meter.

If food be eaten which contains less of these ingredients than the body requires the body suffers loss of weight through burning its own tissues.



All the body's requirements—motive power and waste repairers—are carried in the most perfect, economical, and assimilable form in that perfect food—WHITE'S WAFER OATS.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

AN ARBOR DAY CELEBRATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

Sir,—It is most desirable that a celebration of Arbor Day should be encouraged in our schools. The child of to-day will be the citizen of to-morrow. Whatever is put into our schools will reappear later in the life of the nation; therefore, studies which tend to improve our industrial condition should be fostered carefully.

Arbor Day, essentially an American institution, was inaugurated in 1872 by the late John Morton, of Nebraska, who obtained a State decree for tree-planting. To further his object he secured the co-operation of the State schools, and to-day Nebraska has more than a thousand million trees planted through the agency of Arbor Day observances. The institution has spread all over the States, and has been adopted not only by Canada and other British Colonies, but also by Sweden, Italy, Spain, etc., the authorities in these countries having recognised the importance of interesting school children in the re-afforestation of their homeland. In the United States Arbor Day is universally observed, and the school children plant trees, or even one tree, in the school grounds, amid much ceremony, having first performed what are called Arbor Day exercises. These consist of addresses from the teachers and songs and recitations by the pupils.

In order that the children may participate intelligently in the proceedings the teacher should arrange during the previous week that, as far as practicable, the course of instruction should relate to arboriculture. This easily may be done. Composition, oral and written, offers a wide field. Physical geography might treat of such subjects as forest influence on climate, how the rainfall is affected, effect of forest cover on temperature. Dictation and reading might be from such a book as the "Primer of Forestry." Drawing especially may be pressed into the service; indeed, there is a splendid opportunity for the co-relation of drawing with nature study and languages. The teacher must not lose sight of the fact that the real object in having children observe Arbor Day is to inculcate a love and reverence for trees, but it must also be remembered that the matter does not end with the mere planting. The trees must be cared for afterwards, and the duty falls on the teacher of imbueing the children with a sense of their responsibility and teaching them to have a healthy pride in the growth of the trees.

In Sweden the school children, led by the teachers, annually plant 600,000 trees, with the result that in a world of timber wastage she stands out conspicuously as a land that has cared for her forests and is reaping the benefit of that care. Notwithstanding that Sweden possesses the greatest match factories in the world, is famous for the manufacture of wood-pulp and paper, and exports immense quantities of timber, her forests are in better condition to-day than they were fifty years ago. One reason is that the law requires anyone cutting timber in Sweden to re-plant the area cut over. What has been done in Sweden, in the United States, and in Canada can be done in this island—only more so, because of our splendid soil and favourable climate.

Special festivals are a great help in keeping alive enthusiasm, and I have no doubt that an observance of such occasions as Arbor Day, and money spent in making the school grounds attractive, would be more powerful factors in discouraging truancy than many school attendance regulations.—Yours, etc.,

Matilda McPhail.

POSTAL COLLECTIONS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

Sir,—It is with becoming reluctance that I seek to penetrate the veil of secrecy which envelopes our postal system. However, it is needful sometimes to know the hour at which one may hope that the letter which one posts will be collected. Yesterday I was in such a predicament. I was anxious that my letter should be collected with the morning collection. I examined the "Next Collection" notice on three letter-boxes, but, beyond undecipherable figures, written on small pieces of paper affixed to the enamel plates, I could learn nothing. I then went to a central post office, but could not see any information on the letter-boxes there. I went in to the stamp counter, but before each window there was a small crowd waiting to be attended to. I crossed over to the telegraph counter and asked my question. The reply was that "they did not know—ask at the opposite counter." I went back to the stamp counter and waited several minutes there, but had to leave without asking my question, as I had to catch a train.

I quite realise that the Post Office is no longer an institution to benefit the public, and am prepared to admit that it is great presumption on the part of such a very ordinary individual as myself to carp at the methods of the august beings who control the destinies of the postal system. With all humility, however, I suggest that the exhibition of the times of collection on the various receptacles for letters at the post offices and pillar boxes, and, incidentally, the new rates charged, would be a useful concession to very ordinary people like myself, whose only reason for being allowed to exist is that we may pay heavy rates and taxes without hoping for even the smallest return.—Yours, etc.,

"John Citizen."

NEW ISSUES.

THE EBBW VALE STEEL, IRON, AND COAL COMPANY, LTD.

The Imperial and Foreign Corporation is offering for sale through Barclay's Bank and the British Linen Bank 1,500,000 8 p.c. 7-year notes in dominations of £25, £50, £100, and £500 at 98½ p.c. in the Ebbw Vale Steel, Iron, and Coal Co., Ltd. The notes, which are repayable at par on 1st January, 1928, are part of an issue of £3,000,000, of which £1,500,000 have been applied for firm at 98½ p.c. and will be allotted along with the present issue. Special consideration will be given to applications from holders of the issued stock and shares of the company. The assets are sufficient to provide for the redemption of outstanding debentures and to cover the note issue of £3,000,000 more than three times. The proceeds of the issue are required for two new blast furnaces (one of which is already in blast), coke ovens, waterworks, and other extensions, as also for the purchase of the entire capital of Lancaster's Steam Coal Collieries, Limited. For the last four years the dividend on the ordinary shares has been at the rate of 15 p.c., and the Chairman has no reason to think that this rate will not be maintained in the future. The notes now offered are a sound industrial security, bearing a satisfactory rate of interest. The list will close on or before the 24th instant. (Prospectus page 7.)

SIEMENS BROTHERS AND COMPANY, LTD.

The British Bank for Foreign Trade is offering for sale at the price of 22s. per share the balance of the unissued share capital of Siemens Bros. and Co., Ltd., amounting to 481,875 £1 shares. The position which Siemens Bros. and Co. occupies in connection with the electrical industry of the country is probably unique. Since the business was acquired from the original German owners by the present proprietors the dividend on the ordinary shares up to date has been at the rate of 10 p.c., free of tax. The new money is required to finance extensions in hand and contemplated and dealing with the increasing volume of new orders. The list will close on or before Tuesday next. (Prospectus page 7.)

NATIONAL REVENUE RETURNS.

RECEIPTS COMING SLOWLY.

The Exchequer returns for last week show little improvement, only 17¼ millions being received. In some departments, the revenue seems to be almost stationary. The only advances of importance were in the excess profits duties of five millions and in miscellaneous special receipts of nearly three millions. Nearly three-quarters of the financial year have gone by, and the Chancellor of the Exchequer has only realised some 50 millions over one-half of his estimated receipts for the year. This means that some 660 millions must be realised within the next four months and a half.

TRADE WITH RUSSIA.

STATEMENT BY MR. BONAR LAW.

Lieutenant-Commander Kenworthy, in the House of Commons yesterday, asked the Prime Minister whether all British prisoners had now been released from Russia, and when trade would be permitted between Russia and the British Empire.

Mr. Bonar Law, who replied, said—We are informed that there are still a number of British subjects in regard to whom no information has been received, and we are in communication with the Soviet Government on the subject, and hope that it will soon be possible to make a statement on the subject of trade negotiations—probably in the course of the week.

Lieutenant-Commander Kenworthy asked whether the undertaking was not that prisoners should be released simultaneously with the opening up of trade—(Cries of "No")—and whether, in view of the fact that the great bulk of them had been released the right hon. gentleman did not think that ten months' delay had been too long, especially in view of the parlous state of affairs in trade.

Lieutenant-Colonel Walter Guinness—Is it not the fact that there is nothing to prevent people from trading with Russia at the present time if they are prepared to take the risk, or almost the certainty, of not getting paid?

Mr. Bonar Law—You can only trade with Russia under special licence. The Government are taking all these considerations into account. I quite agree that the time has been far too long, but it is not our fault that so long a time has been taken in releasing the prisoners.

Mr. Asquith asked in what form the statement would be made to which Mr. Bonar Law had referred. Would it be in answer to a question?

Mr. Bonar Law—I did not say definitely it would be made within a week. We have undertaken to resume trade negotiations if certain conditions are fulfilled. One of these conditions was the immediate release of prisoners. We hope that the conditions will be so far fulfilled within a week as to enable us to make a statement.

THE AGRICULTURE BILL.

CONTROL OF PRODUCTION.

The Agriculture Bill was further considered on Report in the House of Commons yesterday, when the discussion was resumed on the Government amendment to Clause 4, which sets up a new sub-section embodying the principle of Government control over production.

The sub-section was eventually agreed to as proposed.

A good deal of time was spent in the discussion of amendments dealing with small matters of detail, all of which were rejected by the Government.

Sir A. Griffith Boscawen promised at a later stage to recommit the bill in respect of Clause 4, in order to insert in the clause the references to the Corn Production Act of 1917, and thus avoid in this case the reproach of legislation by reference.

Sir A. Griffith Boscawen moved an amendment providing means for revoking at any time after the expiration of three years an order appointing a manager or receiver of an estate or land.

This was agreed to.

The Solicitor-General moved an amendment defining, for the purposes of the clause, the expression "necessary works of maintenance" as meaning (a) the maintenance and cleaning of drains, embankments, and ditches; (b) the maintenance and proper repair of farm roads, fences, gates, and hedges; and (c) the execution of repairs to buildings so far as any of these works were necessary for the proper cultivation and working of the land on which they were to be executed.

The amendment was agreed to.

The report of the financial resolution authorising payment of grants under the Ministry of Health (Miscellaneous Provisions) Bill was agreed to without discussion.

THE AMERICAN MARKETS.

(REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.)

STOCKS CLOSED IRREGULAR.

NEW YORK, Tuesday.

Stocks to-day opened with a firm tone, and the sentiment was decidedly more cheerful on the strength of foreign exchange and prospects of easier money rates, with the better-known Industrials and Equipments leading the upward movement. There were some recessions, however, in the later dealings, following the break in General Electric, Sugars, Foods, and Shippings, and the market closed irregular.

THE AMERICAN MARKETS.

(REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.)

STOCKS CLOSED IRREGULAR.

NEW YORK, Tuesday.

Stocks to-day opened with a firm tone, and the sentiment was decidedly more cheerful on the strength of foreign exchange and prospects of easier money rates, with the better-known Industrials and Equipments leading the upward movement. There were some recessions, however, in the later dealings, following the break in General Electric, Sugars, Foods, and Shippings, and the market closed irregular.

The following is a copy of a letter addressed to Imperial and Foreign Corporation Limited (and reduced), hereinafter called the Corporation, by Mr. Frederick Mills, the Chairman of the Company:—

Ebbw Vale, Mon.,
8th November, 1920.

To the Directors of IMPERIAL AND FOREIGN CORPORATION, LIMITED,
1 Broad street place, London, E.C.2.

Gentlemen,—
THE EBBW VALE STEEL, IRON AND COAL COMPANY, LIMITED.

As requested, I beg to give you the following information regarding the present position of this Company:—

1. The Share and Loan Capital of the Company, including the pending Notes, is as follows:—

6 per Cent. Mortgage Debentures now outstanding	£1,010,000
8 per Cent. Seven-Year Notes (pending issue)	3,000,000
7 per Cent. Cumulative Preference Shares	1,200,000
Ordinary Shares	2,500,000
	£7,710,000

2. The value of the Company's Assets, as shown in the last duly audited Balance sheet, dated 31st March, 1920, was as follows:—

Land, Buildings, Works, Plant, etc., as at 31st March, 1917, as per Valuation on a pre-war basis by Messrs. Forster, Brown and Rees, and Messrs. Wheatley, Kirk, Price and Co.		£3,368,224
Expenditure from 1st April, 1917, to 31st March, 1920, less Sales		2,111,173
		£5,479,397
Stocks, Debtors, Investments, Cash in Hand, etc.		2,000,858
		£7,480,255
Deduct:— Liabilities, including Reserves for Special Purposes and Provision for Taxation		1,377,898
Surplus of Assets over Liabilities at 31st March, 1920 (excluding £1,010,000 Debentures)		£6,102,357
to which there must be added the value of Works, Extensions and Increased Stocks since 31st March, 1920, and Shares of Associated Companies acquired since that date (approximately)	£3,450,000
Deduct:— Liabilities on Capital Account to be discharged out of the pending Issue (approximately)	2,000,000
		1,450,000
		£7,552,357
Add the estimated Net Proceeds of the pending Issue of Notes		2,860,000
Making a total of		£10,412,357

3. The surplus as shown above is sufficient to provide for the redemption of all outstanding Debentures and to cover the pending Note Issue of £3,000,000 more than three times.

4. The proceeds of this Issue are required for two new Blast Furnaces (one of which is already in blast), Coke Ovens, Waterworks and other extensions, as also for the purchase of the entire capital of Lancaster's Steam Coal Collieries, Limited, and in part satisfaction of the acquisition of shares in Associated Companies, or to discharge capital liabilities in connection therewith, as above stated.

5. For the last four financial years dividends at the rate of 15 per cent. per annum have been paid on the Ordinary Shares of the Company, and I have no reason to think that this rate will not be maintained in the future. Apart from the earning of this Company, the dividends which we anticipate receiving from the Shares of the Associated Companies recently acquired should be more than sufficient to provide the regular payment of interest on this Note Issue.

Yours faithfully,
(Signed) FRED. MILLS.

APPLICATIONS—Applications for purchase must be lodged with the Head Office or any Branch of Barclays Bank Limited, or The British Linen Bank, together with the amount payable on application. If any application be not accepted in respect of the full amount of the Notes comprised in the application, the surplus amount paid on application will be appropriated towards the amount payable on acceptance, and any balance will be returned to the applicant, and where any application is not accepted the amount paid will be returned in full. Interest at 10 per cent. per annum will be charged on instalments overdue, and failure to pay any instalment of the purchase money when due will render previous payments liable to forfeiture, and will also give the Corporation the right to forfeit or procure the forfeiture of and to resell the Notes in respect of which the default shall have been made.

NOTES—All Notes applied for and accepted hereunder will be procured to be issued directly by the Company to the applicants, and on payment of the amount due on acceptance the names of the purchasers will be entered in the Company's Register of Note Holders as the Holders of the Notes purchased.

Notes will be delivered in exchange for Letters of Acceptance duly receipted for the amount payable on acceptance and the final instalment. The Notes are transferable on the usual transfer terms on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d. per transfer, and such transfers will be duly entered by the Company in its Register of Note Holders.

INSPECTION OF DOCUMENTS—Copies of the Memorandum and Articles of Association of the Company, the form of Note, the original of the above letter, and the Agreement between the Company and Corporation, under which the Corporation agreed to purchase at 93 per cent. the Notes now offered for sale, can be seen at the offices of Messrs. Guedalla, Jacobson and Spyer, Winchester House, E.C., between the hours of 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. on any day whilst the list remains open.

BROKERAGE—A brokerage of ¼ of one per cent. will be paid in respect of accepted applications by the public bearing the stamp of a Broker or Bankers or other recognised agents approved by the Corporation.

The Corporation pays the expenses incidental to and attendant upon this offer, including brokerage and underwriting and overriding commissions of 2½ per cent. and ½ per cent. respectively.

QUOTATION—Applications for an official quotation for the Notes now offered for sale will be made in due course to the Committees of the London and certain Provincial Stock Exchanges.

PLACE FOR OBTAINING DOCUMENTS—Particulars of this Offer for Sale and Application Forms may be obtained from the Corporation or from the Bankers and Brokers, or from the Offices of the Company.

FINANCIAL NEWS

DUBLIN STOCK EXCHANGE.

FUNDS ERRATIC. CITY STEAM FURTHER ADVANCE. DUBLIN TRAMS SCARCE. TEXTILES, DUNLOPS, AND OILS DULL.

There were moderate irregular changes in prices of securities on 'Change yesterday, with actual dealing circumscribed except in very few cases. City of Dublin Steam Stocks continued a feature of strength, with fresh substantial gains on rumours as to the mail contract now expiring. The Funds were pretty busy, and as usual prices moved erratically. Dublin Corporation Stock was harder. Banks closed firm in an idle market, but sellers of Brewery and Distillery shares accepted a slight concession to effect business. Marconis were idle. Home Rails marked time in a stagnant market. The feature in Trams was the bidding for Dublin United Ord., but sellers held for a sharp advance. Dunlop Rubber issues were sellers. Todd Burns Debs. fell away to 65s. Textiles were again weaker, and Lever Bros., Thwaites, and Irish Times Pref. closed the turn easier. Courtaulds and Oils closed lower on profit taking.

The Funds fluctuated. War Loan 5 p.c. rose ⅛ to 83⅛, Funding Loan ¼ to 67¼, and Irish Land 2¾ p.c. ⅛ to 45, while Consols fell ⅛ to 44¼. War Loan 4½ p.c. ¼ to 76, and India 3½ p.c. ⅛ to 54⅛. Dublin Corporation Stock rose ⅛ to 52½ for a small lot.

In Banks, Nationals rose ½ to 16, and Provincial Old shares again closed firm, but nominal at 18½, ¼.

The advance in City of Dublin Steam Stock was continued, and the price rose a further 2 to 136 x.d., and the Pref. 1½ to 87 x.d.

In Home Rails, Great Northern repeated 51¾, but Midland Great Western 4½ p.c. Debs. fell ½ to 41½.

Among Tramways, Dublin United were bid up ⅛ to 6½, but did not offer under 7. The Pref. repeated 7⅛.

Dunlop issues were rather offered. Parent Tyre Pref. fell 1½d. to 13s., Dunlop Rubber Ord. 3d. to 26s. 9d., and the "A" Pref. 1½d. to 17s. 4½d.

As regards Drapery shares, the only change was a fall of 4s. 6d. to 65s. in Todd Burns 4½ p.c. £5 Debs. Pim Bros. 5½ p.c. Pref. remain at 70s.

Manufacturing shares were practically all on offer. Coats fell 6d. to 50s., Cottons 6d. to 37s., Spinners 6d. to 47s. 6d., Lever Bros. 7 p.c. 1½d. to 18s., and Thwaites Ord. 2s. 6d. to 77s. 6d.

In Trading, etc., shares, J. C. Parkes and Sons Pref. rose 3d. to 13s., but Burke Pref. repeated 61s. 6d. Irish Times Pref. fell 2s. to 58s. for an odd lot, and the 2nd Pref. 3d. to 13s. 3d.

Courtaulds reacted to 7½. Kern River Oil quoted 23s. 6d., and the New Ord. fell 3d. to 2s. 7½d. Mexican Eagles realised 12¼, ⅛, and Shells fell ⅛ to 6⅞.

AFTER HOURS.

Further strong buoyancy developed in City Steam after hours, and 140, 141, and finally 142 was paid and bid. Rumours regarding the renewal of the mail contract were contradictory. The sudden rush of support was surprising, but was anticipated by many who study the company's financial position.

STOCKS UNCERTAIN.

INFLUENCE OF FOREIGN POLITICS.

(FROM THE FINANCIAL NEWS OF TO-DAY.)

Uncertainty was the keynote of Stock markets yesterday. The foreign political situation was at the root of the trouble, and particularly the defeat of the Venezelos party at the Greek elections. There was no particular pressure to sell; the fear of subsequent realisations had a depressing influence on values. At the moment investors are holding aloof from existing Stock Exchange securities, the requirements being adequately met by the number of highly promising new capital issues on offer. Government Stocks maintained a relatively firm tone. Persistent buying of the 5 p.c. War Loan in small lots raised the quotation to 83¼, and this despite the talk of coming monetary stringency. The Funding Loan also came in for more attention, and improved; but Consols, which had shown much steadiness during the greater part of the day, dipped to below 45 just before the close, as a result of the appearance of a fairly large seller. National War Bonds reflected the selling now going on for general trade requirements, but the various 3 p.c. issues, as well as Home Corporation Stocks, maintained their recent firmness. Home Rails were a distinctly disappointing market. The Heavy issues were without much change, but for the other descriptions a fairly general decline was recorded. Argentine Rails displayed a considerable amount of weakness. All the leading issues closed from ⅛ to 1½ p.c. down.

LONDON STOCKS DEPRESSED.

(FROM OUR FINANCIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

On the London Stock Exchange the markets were dull and inactive, a condition of things likely to continue until the recent depreciation in foreign currencies takes a turn for the better. Quiet conditions ruled, and the paucity of business, coupled with the difficulty of finding sellers, resulted in further declines in prices. A certain amount of forced selling of a scattered character was a factor in the day's business. Very little business was done in gilt-edged Stocks in the early part of the day, but the general tendency was rather firmer owing to the easier monetary situation. During the afternoon the 5 p.c. War Loan changed hands at the firmer price of 83¼, but Cons. eased to 44⅞.

FOREIGN BONDS LOWER.—No resistance has been offered by Brazs to a little further selling, believed to be on French account. The losses, which were fairly general, ranged from ½ to ¾. German Threes rose to 5¾ on the improvement in the market. French Loans were dull, the 5 p.c. being 45.

Changes.—Rise: German Threes ½ to 5¾. Falls—Brazil Funding (1914), ½ to 69½; Egyptian Unified, ½ to 62; French Loan, ½ to 45 x.d.; Mexican Fives, 1 to 65; Peruvian Corporation, ⅛ to 5¼; Spanish Fours, 2 to 81½; Uruguay 3½ p.c., 1 to 58.

HOME RAILS EASIER.—Home Rails were much as they were last night, and, perhaps, easier for choice.

CANADIAN AND FOREIGN RAILS.—Canadian Pacifics recovered a couple of the 7 points lost on Monday, and Trunks were rather harder. Foreign Rails were on the heavy side, with Havanas 72½ only. The dividend is expected on Thursday. Argentine Stocks also weakened.

INDUSTRIALS IRREGULAR.

SOME BRIGHT SPOTS.

(FROM THE FINANCIAL NEWS OF TO-DAY.)

Conditions in the Miscellaneous and Industrial market were quiet again yesterday, no new factors of importance having arisen. Outside influences, such as selling from Paris and liquidation on account of commodity holders, were responsible for dulness in some directions, but instances of cheerfulness were still to be found, and a small speculative interest. It will have been observed lately that despite the monetary stringency which continues to exercise a depressing effect on the market, a good demand for shares has been readily kindled in cases in which there has been some outstanding attraction to "go for." An immediate example of this kind is supplied by Courtaulds, in which good business was again passing yesterday. Albert Bakers enjoyed a sharp rise. The date of the official announcement regarding amalgamation negotiations is expected to be the first or second week in December. The better tone noticeable in German Threes and the value of the mark exercised a favourable influence on Imperial Continental Gas, the price rising 2 points to 138½. Other gas stocks were quietly firm. In the Iron and Steel department values were generally the turn lower, though Weardale Steel Def. at 1⅛ were ⅛ higher, closing, however, unchanged at 33s. 6d. Vickers and Armstrongs each lost 6d. at 21s. Hadfields weakened further to 26s., and Bolckow Vaughan to 23s. 6d. Brunner Mond also fell 1s. to 30s. 6d. ex-dividend. Dorman Long lost 3d. at 24s., and Ebbw Vale 6d. at 24s. 6d. Powell Duffryn were cheerless at 42s., at which they showed a loss of 1s. 6d. on the day. In common with numerous companies in the same industry, the Cargo Fleet Iron and Steel Works is unable to present an up-to-date statement of its position as at the end of the financial year. In a circular issued to shareholders the directors state that they have experienced great difficulty in determining the liability to the Government for taxation. On the publication of these details the shares of the company yesterday fell sharply to 18s., though closing above the worst at 18s. 6d., with a net loss of 1s. 6d. on the day. Following the rise of the previous day, Courtaulds fluctuated under the influence of speculation. Opening in good request the shares touched alternately 7⅛ and 7⅞, finally closing without net change at 7½. Elsewhere, among Textiles, British Cellulose suffered from profit-taking sales. After opening at 20s. the shares dwindled to 18s. offered, finishing, however, a firmer market above the worst at 18s. 6d. or 1s. 6d. down on balance. Amalgamated Cottons were still 21s., but Calicos eased 6d. to 22s., Spinners ⅛ to 2¼, and Bleachers ⅛ to 1⅛. Among Caterers and Foodstuffs, Van Den Berghs improved ⅛ to 1⅛. Maypoles hardened to 11s. 6d., but Aerated eased on the report to 1⅛. A spurt of 3s. to 28s. 3d. in Albert Bakers followed the reference in this column yesterday to the trend of amalgamation negotiations. Other Tobaccos were quiet, with B.A.T. at 3⅛, or ⅛ easier, and Imperials the turn lower at 48s. 9d. United, however, were a good market at 4⅛. Among Hotels and Restaurants, Carlton Ord. were still 16s. ex-dividend, and the Pref. 5⅛. Allsopp issues were steady in the Brewery section, the Ord. being 89 and the Pref. 70. Watney Combe Pref., however, rose a point to 37, and South African ⅛ to 1⅛. Hodgsons Ord. were marked 4¾ ex-dividend. A weak spot was City of London Ord. at 162, which represented a net fall of 3. In the Land group, Sudan Plantations were a better market, improving to 5⅛, but among Miscellaneous Industrials business was slack, with prices inclined to droop. Dunlops were weak, receding to 25s., or 1s. 6d. down. Parent Tyres Def. eased ⅛ to 2⅛. Cements shed 1s. at 24s. 6d., and British Portlands 6d. at 31s. Oil Cakes finished easier at 40s. 6d. Among Motors, Harper Bean remained dull around 4s., but the Pref. flattened out at 4s. 9d. on the impression that no dividend is to be paid.

MINING MARKETS WEAK.

(FROM THE FINANCIAL NEWS OF TO-DAY.)

No improvement in conditions in the Stock Exchange occurred yesterday. Speculative departments were either idle or very uneasy, and Mines again played a very minor part in the day's proceedings. The influence of Paris, the absence of public demand, and the nervousness of professional operators all combined to check any possible growth of interest, while the announcement of the removal of restrictions on arbitrage dealings failed to mend matters, it being uncertain how the various markets may be affected by the freer interchange of shares. As regards Kaffirs, the transactions put through resulted in the lowering of values of most of the representative counters, and this created depression through the list. Despite the continued firmness of the Cape, such international shares as Central Mining, Johnnies, Randfontein, Modderfontein, Modder "B," and City Deep were more or less depressed, and a further fall of 9d. per oz. in the price of gold did not mend matters, so that on balance not a single improvement would be recorded. Rhodesians made an attempt to free themselves from surrounding influences, and to certain extent succeeded, inasmuch as Chartered managed to add a trifle to the overnight price, while "Tanks" and "Zams" were fractionally harder, and Lonely and Globe kept steady. Gaikas were easier, despite the announcement of a 7½ p.c. dividend, against 3 p.c. However, business did not amount to much, and at the close there was little enthusiasm noticeable. Diamonds continued to feel the full force of the adverse Paris advices and the poor market for the stones. De Beers fell further away, and Premiers were distinctly flat, but Akkim Diamonds were an exception, a sudden demand lifting the quotation appreciably. With the metal market dull and the price but little harder, the Tin share market remained in a state of idleness, which was not relieved by the rumours of a further amalgamation. This time the Bisichi, Forum River, Northern Nigeria Trust, and Ninghi are said to be joining forces, and, although no details were available, the fusion of these concerns, which are more or less under the same direction, and possess mutual interests in the Bauchi Province and elsewhere in Nigeria, was regarded as advantageous to the companies concerned, though still reducing the number of Nigerian market counters. West African Gold shares were quiet, and disappointment over the failure of the Barrier section to respond to the better labour news led to the lowering of values fairly generally. There was very little real selling, but practically all the active shares suffered more or less severely, and the market closed dull. Among Coppers, Tintos dropped a point, and in the Miscellaneous section Mexicans were weaker under the lead of Esperanza, and Chemical and Metallurgical and Colombian Mining also receded.

OIL SHARES BUSY AND LOWER.

Business in all departments of the Stock Exchange yesterday was of a quiet character, but, of the speculative sections, the Oil Share market once more displayed the greatest amount of animation. Even here, however, there was little in the way of outstanding feature, and, with few exceptions, prices were lower on the day. The market had a steady appearance at the start, with business on a fair scale all round, and, when Paris came in a buyer of its favourites, such as Shells and Mexican Eagles, leading shares generally had an improving tendency, but in the afternoon local selling was encountered, causing a reaction which, in the case of Mexican Eagles, brought prices back to the levels ruling overnight. Royal Dutch were bought from Amsterdam, and, although closing below the best, were still higher on balance. Burmahs developed an easier tendency, and Anglo-Persian Prefs. weakened in sympathy. Following their recent advance, Apex Trinidad came on offer and slipped back, and other Trinidad issues had a none too bright appearance, and, though the only other quotable alteration in the group was a decline in Trinidad Leaseholds, British Borneos weakened in sympathy with Apex Trinidad. Anglo-American gave way, and Lobitos were also quoted lower, but Venezuelan Oil Concessions met with a little support and improved. Business in Anglo-Egyptian B slackened, and the price moved down. The production figures of the Anglo-Egyptian Oilfields for the past week show little change, the output amounting to 3,491 tons, as against 3,566 tons for the preceding seven days. Among other Egyptian descriptions, Gemsah Oil Reefs were a steady market at the overnight level. One or two Russians finished lower, although business in these descriptions was of an extremely quiet character. Among Rumanians, Phœnix Oil and Transport maintained a steady tone, and Rumanian Cons. closed without change, but Oilfields Finance left off slightly easier. In other directions a demand arose for Scottish-Americans, which found the shares in short supply, and resulted in an advance in the quotation. Peru Syndicate, on the other hand, slipped back owing to a slackening of demand. Closing prices:—

THE MONEY MARKET.

LOANS AND DISCOUNTS FIRM.

Bank Rate (changed April 15) .... 7 p.c.

For the greater part of yesterday daily money commanded 5½ p.c., and only just before the close was any surplus available. This was quite sufficient to damp the easier tendency of discount rates, and the general quotation for three months' bills was 6⅜ p.c. Those accustomed to deal in fine rates reported a very moderate business at ⅛ p.c. less. A further decline took place in the price of gold, which is now 120s. 9d. per oz. fine. Bar silver fell ⅝d. cash to 51d. and ⅛d. forward to 50⅛d. per oz.

The violent excitement of last week has died down to a certain extent, but there was still plenty of activity about the exchanges. New York was in favour of London, and about 2c. higher on balance. French and Belgian rates, though showing depreciation for francs, did not rise to any extent. Italian lire recovered further. The feature was a drop in the Berlin rate, marks falling 20 to the pound. This is probably due to the statement that France was in accord as to "all nations joining the League." The Spanish peseta improved compared with the £. China rates and rupees weakened in sympathy with the silver position.

FINANCIAL PARAGRAPHS.

The Dunlop Rubber Company announces that the transfer books of the Preference Shares will be closed from Thursday, November 18, to Wednesday, November 24, both days inclusive. No notice is given of the closing of the Ordinary Share registers.

For some time there has been an agitation in favour of a more general practice of the payment of dividends direct to a bank instead of to the stock or shareholder. Obviously this would save much time, labour, and expense, but it would also mean a loss to the Revenue, and this, we believe, is one of the reasons why it is not favoured in certain quarters. A company with a thousand proprietors when paying a dividend uses in the ordinary course 1,000 cheques or dividend warrants, all bearing an impressed stamp of twopence. This means £8 6/8 to the Revenue authorities. Assuming the company paid the dividends into a bank for distribution amongst the proprietors, probably not more than half a dozen cheques would be required, and, at the most, say twenty, as the company would collate the names of proprietors and send only one cheque to each bank, leaving the latter to apportion the sum to individual recipients of the dividends—at least this is the practice with railway companies who pay dividends into banks for their stockholders, and presumably it would become the ordinary procedure.

From the preliminary statement issued by the Argentine Southern Land Company, the year to June 30th last has evidently been a prosperous one, for profits at £94,134 show the very substantial increase of £40,000 odd compared with the previous twelve months. As a result, the position has been considerably strengthened, and the total distribution increased. This time £25,000 goes to general reserve, against £8,000 a year ago, and £25,000 to live stock contingencies and renewals reserve, compared with £17,000. The total dividend is again to be 10 per cent., but this time there is a bonus of 2½, which will still leave the carry forward over £6,000 higher at £30,112. During the past two or three years the capital has been considerably increased. In December, 1918, £28,000 was capitalised from reserves, and distributed as a scrip bonus of 10 per cent., while in November, 1919, £192,000 in shares were offered to existing holders at par. But shareholders have been no strangers to bonus, either cash or scrip, for many years past.

The transfer books of the French Dunlop Income Stock will be closed from to-day (Wednesday) to Tuesday, November 30, both days inclusive.

In our (Financial Times) columns of 1st November we called attention to certain statements which had appeared in the Christiania Norges Handels og Sjofartstidende suggesting that a great combination of British and Norwegian paperworks was under consideration. We have very good reason now to believe that active negotiations are at the moment taking place in London for two big combinations of paper mills, one in England and one in Scotland, the two groups working together. The English combination, we understand, will involve the acquisition of the well-known Norwegian and Belgian mills. Upon making inquiries of the directors of Olives Paper Mills Company, Ltd., and Hartlepools Paper Mill Company, Ltd., a representative of the Financial Times was informed they were unable at this juncture to make any statement.

The Financial News Glasgow Correspondent telegraphs that the Scottish steelmakers yesterday decided on a reduction of prices ranging from 30/- to 80/-. The reduction is due to fear of foreign competition.

MARKET REPORTS.

GRAIN.—DUBLIN CORN EXCHANGE, Tuesday.—The opening of the Curragh Race Meeting denuded our grain market of a good deal of interest to-day. Supplies of corn are coming in very moderately, and largely of inferior description; in fact, not for the last forty or fifty years has the bulk of our Irish grain crop been so unsatisfactory. Oats especially are difficult to get in prime weighty condition, and some blacks can be bought in the country down as low as 23/- per barrel. Locally prices are little changed from last day, viz., 25/- to 28/6 being the run, and for something of extra nice quality in small parcels 29/6 and 30/- has been paid. White oats remain at 30/- to 32/-, and fancy parcels 1/- or 1/6 per barrel more, although there are some holders with even stiffer pretensions. Irish wheat remains from about 58/- to 60/-, with some fancy samples held for more money, which there is a hesitancy in paying. Barley is taking a wider range, viz., from 42/6 to 47/6, but for nicer qualities 48/- and 49/- is asked; in fact, 49/- was paid in one transaction recently for over 2,000 barrels, and it is said that a nice sample was taken up by a certain distilling firm at 51/- per barrel. Rye continues to rate around 60/- per barrel.

NEW SACKS.—You are offered New Goods at the keenest prices consistent with quality. Write for quotations to-day.—J. W. and D. Martin, Ltd., 21 City quay, Dublin, and North street, Cork.—(Advt.)

FLOATING GRAIN CARGOES.—BALTIC, Tuesday.—Allocations of WHEAT included No. 2 hard winter ex store London at 116/6 per 480 lbs. MAIZE dull and lower; Plate steamers afloat, loading, and November sellers 56-. Parcels of ditto November-December sold 52/6, December-January 53/-, January-February 53/6 per 480 lbs. BARLEY inactive; Californian in most positions quoted 91/- per 448 lbs. No. 4 Canada Western November-December 62/-. Canada feed ditto 58/-. American feed 57/- per 400 lbs. OATS dull, weak; a part cargo Danube f.a.q. 5th December loading quoted 44/- per 304 lbs.; Plate f.a.q. January-February sellers 39/-. New Zealand Garton's A. November-December 54/9 per 320 lbs.; No. 2 Canada Western November-December 48/3, No. 3 ditto 47/3 per 320 lbs.

LIVERPOOL, Tuesday.—C.i.f. parcels of wheat were not offered. Maize—Parcels River Plate, under pressure to sell, gave way about 1/6 per qr., recoverable partially on Continental demand for cargoes. Sales covered afloat at 53/-, October-November 53/6 to 52/9. November-December 54/-, 52/6, and 53/3 per 480 lbs. American tailed December sold at 56/6. January 56/- to Liverpool, and November at 58/6 to 58/6 per qr. Manchester. WHEAT on the spot met a moderate demand at late rates. MAIZE—Spot parcels of River Plate were easier at 11/11 to 12/1 for old and 12/3 to 12/4 per cental new crop. FLOUR in only moderate request at the official prices. BEANS, BARLEY and OATS quiet and easier in value. PEAS and OATMEAL showed no material change. MILL OFFALS attracted little attention.

CATTLE.—BIRMINGHAM, Tuesday.—A good supply pigs; slow trade for bacons and small pigs, which were slightly easier. Quotations (per score, dead weight:—Saleable bacons and small pigs, 39/-; sows from at 31/-.

SALFORD, Tuesday.—Larger supply of fat cattle, mostly Welsh and Irish, of fair quality. Trade slow, bullocks and heifers realising 83/- to 98/-, and fat cows 72/- to 90/- per live cwt. Sheep were also in larger supply, and chiefly from the North Country. Quality was well up to the average, but demand weaker at 22d. to 26d. per lb. Numbers in the market—Cattle, 1,732; sheep, 7,937. Fat pigs at Manchester were of good quality, supplies coming from Ireland, Wales, and the Midland counties. Trade ruled firm at 28/- per 14lb. stone.

DERBY, Tuesday.—Smaller supply of fat cattle of fair quality, and trade dearer at 15½d. to 19½d. per lb. Fair entry of sheep, but fewer good quality animals. Fair were penned; trade dear at last week's rates of 25d. to 27d. per lb. Veal calves were cheaper, realising 14d. to 16d. per lb. About 60 fat pigs were on offer, and quality was good, but prices were lower, ranging from 27/- to 28/- per 14lb. stone.

PROVISIONS.—DUBLIN POTATO, Tuesday.—From certain Northern districts potatoes are coming to hand in satisfactory order, but supplies are rather curtailed by difficult circumstances affecting transit here. South, East, and West crops are generally poor, and bad keepers by excessive wet. Trade at this end remains slow, and confined to best sound qualities at from 10/- to 11/- per cwt.

LIVERPOOL, Tuesday.—Fair arrivals of American BACON are entered, but no allotments have taken place, which leaves the market very bare of Cumberlands, Wiltshires, and backs to supply the fresh demand again experienced. Importers, however, have still plenty American Wiltshires on hand, though, selling before, are being overkept. The cheaper sorts meet a quick offtake, and the Danish supply is scarce and meets a quick offtake, and the demand offerings of Irish are readily absorbed. HAMS in fair request, but obtainable only in a fair proportion of American bacon. Shoulders in limited supply and there is still a fair inquiry for fresh squares. LARD on the spot in fair request for American refined, the further allotments including some of the better qualities; prime steam scarce and wanted. Compound inactive at 100 to 110/- per cwt. CHEESE in fair request for [illegible] controlled at 1/3/- per lb., delivered to retailers. Cheshire firm and dearer, but free Canadian quiet at 150/- to 159/- for white and 163/- to 165/- per cwt. for coloured. BUTTER scarce and freely taken up. EGGS unchanged.

DUBLIN FRUIT AND VEGETABLE, Tuesday.—Irish fruit scarce, although more apples were on the market this morning, and averaged 51/- to 52/6 per barrel; some Derbys, 60/-, and Bramleys, 65/-; grapes, 2/6 to 3/9 and 4/- to 4/3 per lb. Almeria (season finishing), 40/- and 42/- per barrel. American, Dutch, and other imported fruits on stock lots are plentiful, but sales are indifferently supported, and prices rule irregularly. Vegetables are still coming in pretty freely, but sales especially cabbage, which is required at effort to clear, as with celery, cabbage, white turnips, and 1/3 and 1/6 per lb.; commodities. Irish tomatoes, 1/3 to 1/6 and 3/- to 3/6 per bushel; York cabbages, 20/- to 25/-; sprouts, 1/8 to 2/3 per float, and 3/- to 3/6 per cwt.; Swede turnips, 3/- to 3/6 per cwt.; Savoys, 15/- to 20/-; 25/-, and 30/- flat Dutch, in broken lots, at 2/- per dozen; celery, small, 8d. to 1/8; large, 2/- to 3/6, and extras, 5/- per bundle; parsley, 6d. to 1/- and 1/8 per float and tray; parsnips, 1/- to 1/6 per dozen bundles, and 7/- to 8/- per cwt.; white turnips, 2d. to 6d. per bundle; cauliflowers, 1/6 to 2/6, 3/6, and 4/- per dozen; carrots, 1/6 to 2/6 per dozen bunches; artichokes, 1/- to 1/6 per float, 2/9 per half bushel; leeks, 3d. to 5d. and 6d.; beet, 4d. to 5d. per dozen; thyme, 4d. to 8d. per bunch.

HALSTON STREET POULTRY AND GAME, Tuesday.—Market for poultry follows a similar routine as previously; in neither supply nor demand is any actual change indicated, but values, if anything, are disposed to develop a firmer tone. Turkeys and geese especially as Christmas move will shortly be asserting itself in the trade. Prime, plump chickens, large fat hens, fat ducks, and big store geese are freely topping previous values. Turkeys, too, are making 2/-, and 3/- to 3/6 cock pheasants, 6/6; hen ditto, 6/-; young pigeons, 1/9; old, 9d.; grey plover, 1/3 per pair; teal, 10d. to 1/- each.

DUBLIN FISH, Tuesday.—Heavy and stormy weather against local fish supplies. One steamer brought in 52 boxes of mixed take; otherwise the small arrivals were principally from country stations, and comprised just 150 boxes herrings. Lobsters scarce; a few 2/- to 2/6 each; seconds, 12/6 to 20/- per 13, average, and smalls, 10/- to 15/- and 20/-; brill, 6/- to 10/-, average; turbots, 3/- to 15/- and 40/- to 50/- per 9 lb., to 5/- and 6/- each; best soles, 40/- to 50/- per lb. 12/6 to 15/- per pairs; mediums, 20/- to 30/-; skates, 2/- per 4 and 6/-; lot; large plaice, 10/- to 12/6 and 15/- per 4 and 6/-; others, 5/- to 8/- per 8; half-boxes plaice, 40/- to 50/-; codfish, 35/- to 60/-; hake, 60/- to 70/-; haddock, 25/- to 40/-; pollock, 25/- to 30/-; ling, 20/- to 30/-; conger, 16/- to 25/-; whiting, 25/- to 30/-; gurnard, 3/- to 27/6; herrings went from 20/- to 50/- per box.

BILLINGSGATE FISH, Tuesday.—Supply fair; steady demand. Soles, 2/-d. to 28d.; slips, 19d. to 27d.; red mullet, 15d. to 18d. per lb.; live eels, 4/- dead 40/- per draft; turbot, 12/- to 13/-; brill, 10/0 to 12/-; plaices, 11/- to 13/-; halibut, 19/- to 21/-; lemon soles, 16/-; cod, 6/- to 9/-; whiting, 2/- to 4/6; bake, 12/-; skate, 6/-; haddocks, 5/- to 7/6 per stone.

LONDON BORO' AND SPITALFIELDS POTATO, Tuesday.—Supplies heavy, and trade keeps very quiet, prices being without material alteration. Best King Edwards quoted at 10/- to 11/6; British Queens, 10/- to 11/-; Arran Chiefs, 8/- to 9/-; Evergoods, 7/6 to 8/-; Blackland King Edwards, 9/6 to 10/-, and Evergoods, 7/6 to 8/- per cwt.

MANCHESTER, Tuesday.—BUTTER—There is no improvement in supplies, the scarcity remaining unrelieved, and prices of free butter firmly maintained. The next allocation of Government butter will commence distribution on November 29 on a 1oz. basis. BACON—Limited supplies of Irish and Danish. Choice lots American in demand; lower grades neglected. HAMS unaltered. LARD—Good demand; supplies somewhat limited. CHEESE—Keen inquiry; finest dairies in consequence higher prices in country. Spot supplies dearer. EGGS—Supplies good; Irish 49/- to 52/-, Danish 49/- to 51/6, Canadians 39/- to 40/-.

BUTTER AND EGGS.—LITTLE GREEN, Tuesday.—Nearly all secondary classes of butter that were about last week and on order have now been practically disposed of, and only a few important parcels of such creams have been cleared around 3/- per lb.; but prime creams, which are now more difficult to get, are firm at 3/1 per lb., control price. Many of this week's consignments due to arrive have not come forward, especially from the Limerick district, where it is impossible to entrain stuff. From other districts there are also difficulties in getting deliveries. The extreme protensions of creamery manufacturers will certainly make the trade difficult at this end if something is not done soon with regard to who pays freight charges, which practically represent ⅛d. per lb. Producers want limited to sell at 3/1 per lb., whilst wholesalers are extreme control figure, whilst wholesalers are limited to 3/1 per lb. The impossible position of the latter is, therefore, obvious. Farmers' butter is plentiful, but mostly of course quality; fair quality firkins sell at 2/4 to 2/7 per lb., and selected sweet class up to 2/8 per lb., whilst low descriptions are down around 2/- per lb., and hard to move. For cools prices range from 2/8⅛ to 2/10, and for separators 2/10 to 2/10⅛ per lb., but very little of latter are coming forward. The egg situation is very strained, and supplies are very light. Average case consignments from known reputable sources are being handled around 47/6 to 50/- per 120, but in the repacking of these prices are discounted to the extent of about 2/- and 3/6, whilst selected and repacked eggs are selling in moderate quantity around control values, viz., 53/- or 53/4. For rehandled case eggs wholesalers are privileged to charge 9d. per 120, or in broken lots at the rate of 1/6 per 120, but the latter prices have not been reached so far, and in fact there seems to be a pinch on control prices, which are only obtainable locally, as with considerable arrival of foreign eggs in Irish eggs, besides uncertainty and difficulty of transport. There is a large quantity of secondary and stale eggs featuring still in arrivals; but wholesalers will not handle these, and are mostly returning same to senders at all events in any circumstances. They are making a very unprofitable account, and should not be sent to this centre. It is hard to find customers for seconds at 32/- to 35/-, the position here is improbable, and prices are nominally quoted at 40/- to 42/- or 44/- per 120, according to the district they come from.

PRODUCE.—LONDON, Tuesday.—SUGAR—Limited sales resulted in free parcels at about late rates. COFFEE—Moderate supplies at auction passed off quietly at about late rates. Futures steady quiet; December quoted 55/3, March also May, 54/6, July 54/- per cwt. COCOA—The large supply of 19,241 bags, including 13,241 British grown, was offered in auction, and only a small portion sold; fine Trinidad 83/6 to 85/6; good Ceylon 120/- per cwt. TEA—Ceylon auctions totalled 24,000 packages, and part to fair demand for the better qualities at steady rates, but common irregular. RICE—Market remained quiet. Ryan dull. SPICE—Pepper steady quiet; fair black Singapore spot sellers 7½d. Tellicherry 7d., white Singapore spot sellers 1/-, ditto November-January 11½d. Zanzibar cloves spot 1/4 to 1/5, as to quality. FLAKE TAPIOCA spot 3½d. DESICCATED COCOANUT—Firm; 1/1½, Manila 1/2. JUTE—Market very quiet, and tendency of prices weak. Native first marks November-December new crop November-December sellers £43; R. & W. native, £44, Daisee No. 2 actuals £43, and [illegible]. HEMP—Manila steady quiet; largely nominal. Calcutta Hessians and Twills slow of sale, and ton [illegible]. SHELLAC—At public sales 523 packages offered, and chiefly without reserve; fair T.N. orange, free to firmly matted, 590/- to 630/-; fine second orange, 595/- to 625/-; small broken dark reddish, free to matted, 560/- to 550/-; half T.N. spot quoted 600/-, December 480/-, per cwt. TIN spot quoted 600/-, December quoted 1/8 COPRA—Linseed oil steady quiet; plantation standard crops spot sold 1/1, December quoted 1/2. 1/3 RUBBER—Firm. OILS—Linseed flat, spot not quoted 57/- sellers 74/-; refined barrels 85/-. Cocoanut—Crude quoted 74/-, and Ceylon November-December 88/-. Soya quiet. Turpentine steadier; American spot 105/-. Petroleum and OILSEEDS—Linseed dull and unaltered. Calcutta November-December quoted £33 Castor unaltered. Rosin unaltered; [illegible] 10/- Cottonseed quiet; Egyptian November-December [illegible] 10/-.

LIVERPOOL AGRICULTURAL PRODUCE, Tuesday.—The market to-day for farm produce was fairly good, and prices were in most cases almost unchanged.

Potatoes—King Edwards 12/6 to 13/-, Maincrops 12/- to 13/-, Templars 8/6, Great Scotts 8/6 to 10/6, Majesties 9/-; Swede turnips 5/- to 6/-, carrots 6/- to 7/- cwt. Cucumbers 9/-, celery 3/- to 5/6, cauliflowers 2/- to 4/6, cabbages 2/6 to 3/6 per dozen.

CLYDE CRUSHED SUGAR, Tuesday.—Official Report—Market steady.

LIVERPOOL COTTON (Closing), Tuesday.—American dull. Brazilian quotations reduced 17 points. East India unchanged. Egyptian in fair request. November, 13.30d.; December, 13.36d.; January, 13.26d.; February, 13.16d.; March, 13.08d.; April, 13.01d. Sales, 4,000; imports, 6,934 bales. Market quiet.

HAY AND STRAW.—SMITHFIELD, Tuesday.—Owing to yesterday and this morning's boisterous and unsettled weather smaller supplies of hay and straw came on market here this morning. There was a fair attendance of buyers, but no particular great in the demand for any description of fodder, and values in general were little disturbed or varied from previous currencies. Only soft and poor classes of old meadow hay were again difficult to clear. Choice strong horse hay went freely up to 11/- and 11/6 per cwt.; good meadow ditto, 9/9 to 10/6; fair sorts, 8/- to 9/6; best old meadow, 6/3 to 7/6 per cwt.; other kinds, 5/- to 5/6 and 6/- per cwt.; wheaten straw, 6/- to 6/6; oaten from 4/9 to 6/- and 6/6 per cwt.

TRADE REPORT.—MANCHESTER, Tuesday.—The cloth market is suffering from the steady depreciation of values. Goods appear to be wanted in various directions. Under existing conditions merchants will not take the risk of making contracts. All outlets content themselves with picking up odd lots at very low prices. Further weakness noticeable in yarns, and workable offers scarce in all counts and qualities.

LONDON WOOL SALES.

Catalogues comprising 11,098 bales Government wool were brought forward last evening. There was no material change to report in the condition of the market, as compared with last evening, with the exception of the fact that a somewhat better tone prevailed in the competition for cross-bred wools.

BELFAST

AND OTHER NORTHERN DISTRICTS (MANSION HOUSE, DUBLIN)

RELIEF FUND.

URGENT APPEAL FOR HELP.

MANSION HOUSE, DUBLIN, 11th July, 1920.

The following Appeal is issued by the Mansion House (Dublin) Committee:—

The urgent need for further Funds compels the Committee of this Fund to make the following appeal:—

The expelled workers of Belfast, deprived of their means of livelihood, and starving with their wives and families because their political or religious views have been made the test of their right to support themselves and their families.

We do not wish to raise any controversial issue, but merely on grounds of humanity to face the awful fact that almost 10,000 workers have been expelled. Very many of these are heads of families, the bread-winners of their little ones. The result is that over 30,000, counting young and old, have been receiving daily relief from the Distress Fund.

The case we have stated makes a plain call to Christian Charity.

We earnestly appeal, therefore, to the well-to-do to help us to continue the work of helping these victims of intolerance.

Further Subscriptions should be sent to THE LORD MAYOR, Mansion House, Dublin. They will be duly published in the Press.

THE NEED IS STILL VERY URGENT.

Alderman L. O'NEILL, Lord Mayor of Dublin, Chairman.

COMMITTEE:
